THREE CENTS

Final Action Likely Today On 43-Million D. C. Budget

Senate Adopts Report; House Vote Delayed by Blanton.

Ban on Outside Pay Scrapped by Foes

Fiscal Relations Study, Thomas' Plan, Is Left Up to Roosevelt.

By James D. Secrest.

Final legislative action on the District supply bill will be taken by the House today, following the lead of the Senate, which yesterday adopted a conference report agreed on earlier in the day. The bill, one of the largest in the history of the District, provides an estimated total of $43,500,000, a figure exceeded only by the "prosperity era" budgets of 1931 and 1932.

A sudden case of laryngitis late last night prevented the House from adopting the report and speeding the bill to the White House. Speaker Bankhead called upon Representative Thomas L. Blanton, chairman of the House conferees, to bring up the report at 11 o'clock, but the Texan insisted upon a postponement until today.

While the Speaker talked and as Representative O'Connor, acting majority floor leader, nudged him, the Texan ran his fingers up and down his throat and huskily whispered that his throat was too sore.

Wanted Time to Answer.

After adjournment he admitted to the press that he wanted time to answer some of the criticisms leveled at him earlier in the day in the House and the Senate. He indicated, however, he will not try to alter the conference agreement.

As the District bill passed the Senate, it is approximately $1,775,000 above Budget Bureau recommendations, about $2,500,000 higher than last year's appropriation, and some $965,000 in excess of the original House measure.

The agreement, reached abruptly yesterday morning, constitutes a distinct victory for the Senate—the greatest victory in recent years of perennial controversy. Under the leadership of Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, the Senate conferees prevailed in 66 of their 87 amendments, receded in only 9, and got the better of most of the 12 compromises.

The conference report provides a Federal lump sum of $5,000,000. This is $700,000 below the Budget Bureau estimate and the amount voted by the Senate, but $2,300,000 above the original House figure and $800,000 higher than the compromise offer.

Coupled with the lump sum agreement is another Senate victory: An authorization for the President to have a fiscal relations study made in time for report to the next Congress a formula that its sponsors hope will put an end to the annual bickering between Senate and House over the Federal contribution to the District's expenses.

Balanced D. C. Budget.

Senator Thomas said the bill will give the District a balanced budget for the next fiscal term and thus removes the threat of new or additional taxes, raised when the House slashed the lump-sum payment, while adding more than $1,600,000 in Capital improvements.

Adoption of the report in the Senate was marked by an unprecedented attack on Blanton, by a group of Senate leaders. It is rare when one or more members in either House assail a member of the other body of Congress.

The attentive reception given by the Senators, however, showed clearly their approval of the outburst and their resentment of the Texan's tactics in connection with the District appropriation bill conference.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, launched the critical broadside after Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, had asked Senate approval of the fiscal relations compromise.

After explaining he did not wish to delay approval of the conference report at such a late date, Senator Clark said:

"I desire to express my very great indignation and the very fear for a system which has been employed in the last few years which makes it possible for one member of either branch of the Congress to undertake

Teachers Told to Ignore Query; Blanton Is Assailed in Senate

Questionnaire Is Called 'Insult' at Meeting of School Board.

Yesterday was a red-letter day in the life of Representative Thomas L. Blanton.

The Board of Education told District teachers they had a right to refuse to reply to the Texan's questionnaire.

Two organizations of teachers defied Blanton's threat to call their members before his House sub-committee for ignoring his questionnaire, which asked, among things, their views on communism and religion.

The Texan was condemned, not by name but by inference, by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, on the floor of the upper chamber, comparing him to three European dictators, Hitler, Stalin and Mussolini.

Censure Move Beaten.

In the House a resolution censuring Blanton was introduced, only to be killed on a point of order. Representative Kent Keller, of Illinois, introduced the resolution.

Seventy-five Washington parents, representing thousands more through parent-teacher associations, crowded the Board of Education's meeting room to back and cheer the board's resolution.

The resolution read:

"We * * * advise teachers and employes that they are free voluntarily to answer the questions asked, and advise them that if they do not desire to reply, they have a perfect right, in our opinion, not to do so, and that the fact that they reply or make no reply will have no bearing whatever upon their position, status and record in the public schools."

The parents, many of whom attended the meeting as representatives of parent-teacher groups throughout the city, came to denounce the Texas Representative who has been the storm center of a Congressional controversy over alleged Communist activities in the schools.

REPRESENTATIVE KELLER.

They called Blanton's question on teachers beliefs in God "an insult to the teachers and pupils." Their stand was backed by Representative Keller, who earlier in the day had appeared on the oor of the House with a resolution to censure the Texas member for his questionnaire.

Obtaining permission to address the meeting, Keller denied Blanton had any authority to call a teacher who refused to answer the questionnaire before his sub-committee on District appropriations.

"You (teachers) are courting no danger by refusing to sign or answer that questionnaire," Keller declared. "No one has less authority

Eclipse of Sun 'Magnificent,' Moscow Wires

Scientists of 22 Nations Watch Lunar Shadow Speed 2,000 Mi. Hr.

Shortly before a midnight last night Associated Press wires brought Washington news from Moscow that the total eclipse of the sun had occurred as a "complete and magnificent spectacle."

Scientists here, interested in American expeditions to photograph and study the eclipse on the other side of the world, were cheered by the indication that these expeditions probably had favorable weather for their observations.

The dispatch from Moscow stated that the eclipse first became visible over Soviet territory at Tuapse at 6:58 a. m. today (10:58 p. m. yesterday, Eastern standard time).

Scientists of 22 nations observed the phenomenon.

The Associated Press cabled a Reuters News Agency wireless report to Moscow from Belo Rehmenskaya which described the phenomenon thus:

"The eclipse was a complete and magnificent spectacle. At 7 a. m. the clouds took on a reddish green aspect and obscurity became complete. At 7:01 a. m. the total eclipse had nearly ended. At 7:04 a. m. the sun shone fully again."

The path of totality sped along at 2,000 miles an hour and became visible in rapid succession at the various points where scientific expeditions were stationed, depending on the weather, which was slightly cloudy.

Two Washington expeditions worked feverishly to make the most of the brief two minutes of the eclipse, during which the sun, weather, permitting, was expected to disclose some of its heretofore unrevealed secrets.

These were the National Geographic-Georgetown University expedition, headed by Dr. Paul A. McNally, director of the Georgetown College Observatory, and the National Geographic-Bureau of Standards expedition, headed by Dr. Irvine C. Gardner.

The first expedition is stationed at Kustanai, some distance from the Ural Mountains, in the Siberian steppes. The second is at Akbulak, another primitive Siberian city.

An expedition of Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology also is at Akbulak. Other Americans are scattered along the black roadway the eclipse laid down—some as far from civilization as lonely Kamishari, Island of Hokkaido, Japan, where high, snow-clad peaks tower above the Pacific.

Americans will first hear radio

Renewed Fight On Two-Thirds Rule Threatens

Democrats of Rural South and West to Be Pitted Against East.

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, June 18.—Democrats are being driven toward a fight between rural and city voters for control of the party at their national convention next week.

The issue of whether the Presidential candidate must obtain two-thirds of the 1,100 votes to be nominated instead of a simple majority appeared tonight to be the start of a battle that may leave scars long after the last delegate has gone home and put his badge in month balls.

Delegates arriving early are chiefly from the agrarian South and West. They are almost unanimous in demanding that the two-thirds rule—established in the days of Andrew Jackson—be retained. It is their only weapon, they say, against domination of the party from the big cities of the East and North. Once Dixie unites against a candidate under the present system, his cause is lost because enough votes can be mustered to keep him from getting the necessary two-thirds.

Postmaster General Farley spoke for the populous East when he said that he personally favored the abolition of the two-thirds rule. The argument of that faction is that the most votes come from the big cities and that no section should be allowed to veto the will of the majority.

Party of "Little Fellow."

"The Democratic Party," said one delegate who declined to allow his name be used, "was organized by and for the little fellow. The only way the little fellow can keep the Democratic Party is to keep control of it. Most of the little fellows are where I am from—the South and the West. That's why we want to keep the two-thirds rule."

Farley tried to break the two-thirds rule in 1932 at a time when President Roosevelt's nomination was in the balance. He retreated from his position when the rural delegates threatened revolt.

The committee which will bring this battle to the floor at the convention is headed by a chubby, red-faced man who has had personal experience with the workings of the two-thirds rule. He is Senator Bennett C. Clark, of Missouri, son of Champ Clark, former Speaker of the House.

At the 1912 convention in Baltimore, Champ Clark, a leading candidate for the nomination, surged across the majority line but never could get the necessary two-thirds of the votes. Woodrow Wilson was nominated. It was a vivid lesson

Wife, 2 Children of Professor Are Slain in Pittsburgh Home

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, June 18.—Police found Mrs. Eleanor Feely, 30, wife of a University of Pittsburgh assistant professor, stabbed to death and her two small children strangled in their spacious home tonight.

Police Lieut. George Schmotzer said the bodies of all three were found in the children's playroom on the third floor of the home in the fashionable Brushton district.

Schmotzer said a scarf was twisted around the neck of 5-year-old Robert, a rope was found around the neck of Janice, 3, and that the mother's body bore stab wounds, made apparently with an ice pick.

Police broke into the house after a neighbor reported the dwelling was dark all night.

Schmotzer said that he believed all three had been dead several hours.

The children were clad in their night clothing. The mother, dressed in a shirtwaist and skirt, was found lying face down against a radiator.

The woman's husband, Martin J. Feely, is assistant physical education professor at the University of Pittsburgh. Schmotzer said Feely was at a summer camp in Potterville, Somerset County, N. J.

Jeers Greet Eden's Plan On Sanctions

Decision to Take Lead to Abolish Curbs on Italy Is Attacked.

Government Destroying League of Nations, Laborites Charge.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 18.—The British government, as Laborites jeered, announced to a tense House of Commons today it would take the lead to remove sanctions from Italy in an attempt to stave off a European war.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, asserting collective security has failed, ended bitter debate by calling for a peace understanding between Britain, Germany and France. He made no specific proposals toward this end.

Earlier, Anthony Eden, handsome young foreign secretary and so-called "White Knight of Geneva," blushed when opposition members shouted "Shame! Resign!" as he explained Britain's about face on the question of sanctions.

Laborites, vehemently attacking the government, charged it was destroying the League of Nations and white-maned David Lloyd George, world war premier, said Eden was going to Geneva to smash the League. He thundered:

"There is nothing but anarchy as an alternative: There will be international anarchy the moment this is known."

Eden, visibly angered by opposition heckling, retorted: "The honorable members are making cheap gibes."

Warning Issued.

Both Eden and Baldwin warned peace may be lost and nothing could be gained if the old policy of sanctions is maintained.

Prime Minister Baldwin said: "I do not think myself it is necessarily a mark of cowardice to take the action we know will be repugnant to large sections of our people.

"We take it because of the present state of Europe. We honestly believe it is the wiser of two courses and the one most conducive to peace."

Eden said: "If we cling to a course after the object has become unobtainable we may lose the greater end for which we are working, the greater end being to keep the peace. If it means admitting failure, this is one instance in which it has got to be faced."

The Labor Party will move for a vote of censure when debate is resumed Tuesday, Clement A. Attlee, labor leader, announced.

Asserting collective security has failed, Baldwin said: "If possible, it shall not fail again * * * I regard it as of first importance that Germany, France and ourselves should work for peace throughout all Europe side by side.

"We, as trustees of the people," he said, "ought to remember if there is a war against this country nearer than the Mediterranean, they will pay for it on the first night with their lives. The first blow may come from the air."

"The part Germany can play for good or evil in Europe is immense," he added.

Among those who heard the debate was Dino Grandi, the Italian ambassador.

Speech Interrupted.

At one time Conservatives overflowed into Laborite benches, but finally withdrew. Eden's speech was interrupted for 10 minutes by exchanges between Laborites and Conservatives.

Laborites laughed scornfully when Eden said "the government is determined the League should go on."

Arthur Greenwood, Laborite, accused the government of "truckling to a dictator" and added: "During the whole of this debate there has been not a single word of sympathy for a broken nation, no word of condemnation for the power which deliberately organized the use of poison gases in spite of treaty obligations."

He called the decision to drop sanctions an "astonishing and sudden conversion" and "the biggest act of political treachery in the history of the country."

Eden, taking part of the responsibility for the government's decision, said:

"Ever since the Italo-Ethiopian dispute began the government have taken their full part in collective action. * * * We have no intention of departing from that principle now."

Speaking of the causes of the failure of sanctions, he said: "One of them was the miscalculation by military opinion in most countries that the conflict would last very much longer than in fact it has done. * * *

"We have nothing to apologize for, nothing to retract. * * * Sanc-

Court Plea Lost, Elephant Is Shot

San Francisco, June 18 (AP).—A police marksman shot "Wally" to death today because the huge elephant had killed his trainer.

Attorneys for "Wally" lost their final court action.

The district Court of Appeals declined to issue a restraining order to Roommate Alexander Mosslig.

The elephant was spreadeagled and chained. About 50 persons watched the execution.

Three shots were fired from 9 feet away. The beast staggered at the first shot, which struck him between the earhole and the left eye. Then he rolled over as the other bullets crashed into his head.

Inspector Leo Connors fired a heavy .306-caliber rifle.

40 Arrested As 6 Are Shot In Ohio Strike

Factory Workers Taken Through Picketing Lines to Jail.

All Kent Plants Closed; Tear Gas Barrage Starts Conflict.

By the Associated Press.

Kent, Ohio, June 18.—Sheriff E. L. Burr and Police Chief St. Clair West escorted 40 strikebreakers tonight from the plant of the Black & Decker Electric Co., where they had been besieged during a day of armed conflict in which six men were wounded.

The men were placed in a large moving van, with a police car as a front guard and the sheriff's car as a rear guard.

Leaders of a strike of union machinists, whose pickets conducted a siege of the plant today, rode on the truck and the cars, urging a huge crowd about the plant to let the men through their lines.

The sheriff said the men would be taken to the county jail in Ravenna. He bore John Doe warrants charging them with shooting with intent to wound, signed by Douglass Rupp, president of the Portage County Central Labor Union.

Tear Gas Barrage.

Today's violence started when the men entered the plant, accompanied by a barrage of tear gas. Pickets of the machinists' union, which called a strike six weeks ago, rallied their forces, and for four hours the plant was a scene of rifle firing and rock throwing.

The sheriff said his car contained ammunition which had been carried out of the plant.

Behind his car was a truck, stacked with food and clubs. The crowd surged about this truck, stopped it, and dumped out its contents.

As the van entered the plant gates to bring the men out, several hundred persons climbed a 7-foot fence and advanced toward the plant with rocks in their hands. There was no violence, however.

The crowd booed as the van came out through the gates.

In front of the plant, its tires flat and its sides pierced by bullet holes, stood one of the trucks which had entered the plant this morning. The other stood at the side of the plant, and also had many bullet holes in it.

A water tank had been punctured by bullets and down its sides still ran water.

Chief West lodged the 40 in City Jail tonight, saying they were "here for the time being." He declined to say how soon the men would be taken to Ravenna

All Plants Closed.

All Kent industrial plants were closed, and hundreds of their employes joined the several thousand strikers, sympathizers and spectators in the vicinity of the besieged factory. Officials estimated the crowd at times totaled nearly 5,000 persons.

Earlier, Adjt. Gen. Emil Marx ordered National Guard observers to the scene after company executives complained union men prevented the removal of the wounded. Gov. Martin L. Davey, whose home is in Kent, said he would withhold comment pending further developments.

Of the wounded, three were on the strikers' side and three were among two-score men held virtual prisoners in the plant.

The identified wounded were John Pudloski, 40, shot in the leg; Al Gray, 26, a shotgun pellet wound in the face; J. W. Pomphrett, 47, minor shotgun pellet wound; John Hogan, 41, a serious stomach wound, and Nick Lemo, 42, of Cleveland, superficial arm wound.

Seriously Hurt.

Capt. Joseph Parilla, of the Ohio National Guard, said Hogan crawled from the factory and was taken to Cleveland. Physicians there said his condition was serious.

Lemo and another wounded man were taken in ambulances from the factory to a Ravenna hospital under a "truce" to which pickets agreed after Col. Gilson D. Light, of the Ohio National Guard, informed them he would have guardsmen on the scene in an hour if they prevented removal of the injured.

Ammunition dealers said their stocks were almost depleted during the morning, when armed men sent rifle bullets into the plant almost incessantly for four hours. Police Chief St. Clair West said the strikers fired from three sides. He ordered the sale of shells halted.

The union declared the strike, William Crawford, local president of the International association of machinists, explained, to enforce demands for a 10 per cent wage increase, a 35-hour week and collective bargaining. The concern normally employs about 400 men, a majority of whom the union claims as members. The factory has not operated normally since the walkout.

Youth Is Drowned As Canoe Capsizes

A young man, who was drowned late yesterday when his canoe capsized in the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal above Chain Bridge, was identified last night as Leonard Fox, 22, of 1414 Twentieth street northwest.

Identification was made by his roommate, G. F. Noah. He said Fox was employed by the Government and came here from Winston-Salem, N. C.

First word of the accident was furnished police by Kenneth Westcott, 14, of the 7500 block of Sherrier place northwest, who said he saw a man struggling in the water.

Just before he disappeared in midstream, he shouted for help, police were told.

$785,000,000 Tax Bill Completed for Report To House Tomorrow

Senate, House Join in Drive To Adjourn Tomorrow Night

Prospective Coal Bill Filibuster by Holt a Major Barrier.

By Felix Bruner.

Congress yesterday was rapidly clearing the decks for adjournment, planned tomorrow night, by rushing important legislation to enactment.

The deficiency appropriation bill, the only major "must" measure except the tax bill, went to the White House for President Roosevelt's signature. The measure, which includes $1,425,000,000 for relief, finally was passed minus the $10,000,000 provision for the Florida ship canal. The Senate agreed to eliminate the canal provision after the House had turned it down Wednesday.

Also sent to the White House for signature was the Robinson-Patman anti-price discrimination bill, usually known as the chain store bill. The Senate approved a conference report already agreed to by the House.

The House last night adopted a conference report on the last remaining appropriation bill, providing money for the Postoffice and Treasury Departments. The bill included $26,000,000 as an ocean mail subsidy.

The House spent most of the night session considering the Walsh-Healey bill which would require Government contractors to abide by provisions similar to NRA codes, insofar as work for the Government is concerned. The House is ready to vote on the measure today.

Besides the tax bill, the only remaining legislation which will be seriously attempted is the ship subsidy bill and the Guffey-Vinson bill, introduced as substitutes for the Guffey coal bill, invalidated by the Supreme Court. The Senate has agreed to vote on the subsidy bill not later than today at 1 p. m. It has passed the House, but it is loaded down with Senate amendments which may cause trouble in conference. Leaders will not, however, permit disagreement on the bill to delay adjournment.

The principal threat to Saturday night adjournment at present is the Guffey bill. The measure has passed the House and will be brought up in the Senate as soon as the ship subsidy bill is disposed of. Senator Rush Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, has threatened to filibuster against the bill, and Senate business may be delayed as long as he can stay on his feet. Adjournment last year was delayed over a week-end by a filibuster conducted by Senator Long against the deficiency appropriation bill.

Steep Corporate Surplus Levies Victory for Administration.

Small Businesses Permitted Option

80% 'Windfall' Excise Included; Loopholes in Law Narrowed.

By Robert C. Albright.

Complete agreement on a $785,000,000 tax bill, striking a heavy blow at corporate "bigness," and satisfying Administration demands for stiffly graduated penalty taxes on undivided company profits, was reached late yesterday by a House and Senate conference committee.

Spurring the drive for adjournment of Congress before the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia next week, the report will be presented to the House tomorrow, and may be passed by both chambers in time for a week-end getaway.

Sharp dissent from the action was taken immediately by Senators David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, and Walter F. George, of Georgia (Democrats). They will file a minority report taking to task the whole philosophy of undivided profits taxation, but will make no move to block the adjournment parade.

The two Democratic conservatives, who saw the Senate tax bill riddled in conference and their proposal for a 1 per cent increase in individual income surtaxes thrown into the scrap heap, asserted their "unwillingness to accept the new and radical principle of a graduated supertax on undistributed earnings."

"The bill will operate to substitute through tax pressure, bureaucratic judgment instead of ownership direction and judgment as to what is the sound, prudent and financially wise policy necessary for steady employment and general prosperity," Walsh and George said in a joint statement.

Small Firms Burdened.

"It gives no relief, but additional burdens to the thousands of business concerns throughout the country employing less than 250 employes, who constitute 98 per cent of the corporations, and who are the backbone of employment and prosperity in every city and hamlet in the country.

"The creation of new corporations and the expansion of present ones is discouraged, and financially strong corporations are given decidedly competitive advantage."

Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee, on the other hand, registered immediate approval, and said he is "certain" the Administration is satisfied. Senator William H. King, of Utah, who led the Senate conferees, said he did not get what he wanted, but "it was a pretty good compromise." Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, said the agreement was as bad as the House bill, or worse.

Senate opposition to revolutionary taxation of undistributed corporate earnings, one of the cardinal points in the President's tax message, yielded before powerful Administration pressure, and a solid front for that principle by the House.

The result is a proposed system of taxation, intermixing conflicting normal corporate income tax rates with supertaxes on undivided earnings—a combination designed to preserve assured income from the existing corporate tax plan, and at the same time to pick up added millions from companies which fail to make a complete distribution of dividends.

Income Tax Up to 15%.

Highlights of the so-called "compromise" bill are:

Normal taxes on corporate income ranging from 8 per cent on the first $2,000, to 15 per cent on all over $40,000.

Graduated taxes on undistributed corporate earnings ranging from 7 per cent on the first 10 per cent of profits retained, to 27 per cent on all earnings retained in excess of 60 per cent.

So-called small companies earning $50,000 or less would have the privilege of paying 7 per cent on either the first $5,000 of earnings, or the first 10 per cent of earnings, whichever is the greater.

Continuation of capital stock and excess-profits levies, with the capital-stock tax reduced from $1.40 per $1,000 to $1.00 per $1,000.

Dividends made subject to the

Douglas to Get Collier Trophy, Aviation Prize

Coveted Award Will Go to Manufacturer for His Passenger Craft.

The Collier Trophy for 1935, aviation's highest award, will be given to Donald W. Douglas, 44-year-old head of the Douglas Aircraft Co., Inc., Charles F. Horner, president of the National Aeronautic Association, announced yesterday.

The award, made annually for the greatest achievement in American aviation, is being given Douglas for the "development of the outstanding twin-engined commercial transport plane."

In its citation the trophy board, referring to the low-wing, all-metal 14-passenger Douglas DC2, wrote:

"This airplane, by reason of its high speed, economy and quiet passenger comfort has been generally accepted by transport lines throughout the United States. Its merit has been further recognized by its adoption abroad and its influence on foreign design is already apparent. In making this award, recognition is given to the technical and production personnel of the Douglas organization."

Although it was for his work in commercial aviation that Douglas was honored, his reputation in the aircraft industry was built largely on the planes he constructed for the Army and Navy.

He started his career with the Glenn L. Martin Co. following his graduation from the Massachusetts

252 Promoted In Revamping Of Air Force

Six Generals to Command Designated Sections of G.H.Q. Corps.

The first move in the reorganization of the officer personnel of the Army Air Corps to keep step with the expansion of the Army's air force was taken yesterday when President Roosevelt sent to the Senate for ratification the names of six commanding generals, five of them of brigadier general rank and one a major general.

At the same time, the War Department announced that 252 temporary officer promotions in the Air Corps had been approved, 12 lieutenant colonels to be colonels, 36 majors to be lieutenant colonels, and 204 captains to be majors.

Both sets of promotions were made possible by President Roosevelt's signing of the triple provision Air Corps Reserve act Wednesday afternoon revising the method of temporary promotion in the Air Corps. Additional promotions are expected when the final plan for reorganizing the Army's air force now being drawn up by Maj. Gen. Frank M. Andrews is submitted and approved.

Maj. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, who is to continue in command of the General Headquarters Air Force at Langley Field, Va., was one of the six commanding generals nominated yesterday by the President. Those named for brigadier general

Gooch, Kidnaper, Must Hang; Plea Denied Again by President

President Roosevelt last night, for the second time, refused to intervene in the case of Arthur Gooch, Southwestern gunman, who is scheduled to be hanged at 5 a. m. today in the Oklahoma State Penitentiary at McAlester.

Gooch's life is being taken, not for a life, but because he and a companion kidnaped two Texas officers who had tried to arrest them, and after mistreating them, transported them over the Oklahoma line.

It was because of the mistreatment, plus the kidnaping, that Gooch was sentenced to be hanged. He was tried under the so-called Lindbergh kidnaping law, as amended by Congress.

This amendment, designed to protect law officers, prescribed the death penalty in cases where the person kidnaped was harmed. Gooch will be the first to die under it.

President Roosevelt's statement on the Gooch case was made public in the office of Attorney General Homer Cummings. It was the first time the President had broken his his rule of silence on such matters.

Gooch, in appealing for clemency, said he thought the death penalty was excessive. In refusing to intervene, the President pointed out that Gooch was a robber and carried firearms; that he was an escaped convict when the officers he kidnaped sought to arrest him; that he and his companion fired "with intent to kill" when other officers brought them to bay, and that the Supreme Court of the United States had upheld the death verdict.

"While I sympathize with those who are pleading for clemency, and especially with the members of his family," the President said, "nevertheless I cannot rid myself of the belief that they are asking for the exercise of a power which under the law and facts I would not be justified in using."

Gooch was told the news in his cell at the State penitentiary in McAlester, Okla.

"I'm sorry Mr. Roosevelt takes that attitude," Gooch told an Associated Press correspondent. "I don't feel I should die for so small a crime as mine."

Gooch was talking to his wife and their 6-year-old son when word of the President's decision came. He paled, but later grinned and said:

"I'll take it on the chin. I won't cry."

3-Million Fund For Race Asked By Republicans

$1 Certificates for 'Share' in Drive Sell Fast; Hamilton Claims N.Y.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 19.—The Republican Party settled down in its new farmland capital tonight and started at once to dig for a $3,000,000 campaign bankroll.

The enlarged proportions of the election fund the party hopes to raise were disclosed by Treasurer Charles B. Goodspeed as Chicago took the reins of Republican affairs from Washington's hands.

The drive for the $3,000,000, Goodspeed said, would be made through sale of "dollar certificates"—"shares" in campaign "stock" which cost contributors $1 each.

Letters would be sent out to a million persons, he explained. In each of these would be three envelopes, to be given to the recipients' friends, who would send each envelope back to the party treasurer with a dollar bill in it.

A good percentage of return was indicated, Goodspeed asserted, by experiments conducted in the last six weeks.

He said the "dollar certificate" sale had already met with an enthusiastic response, particularly since the nomination of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas and Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago, as Presidential and Vice Presidential nominees.

$16,000 in May.

The certificate sale totaled $16,000 in May, the treasurer said. Before the Cleveland convention the daily average was $700. The day after the ticket was chosen this figure jumped to $1,500, and on Monday of this week went on up to $2,500.

At the end of the convention, he said, the campaign chest held between $250,000 and $260,000.

No grand total had been set for campaign expenditures, Goodspeed declared, explaining: "We'll do all the things that have to be done and then try to raise enough money to pay for it."

Until National Chairman John Hamilton returns from a series of finance and strategy conferences in New York and Washington, the headquarters will be in charge of the senior member of his triumvirate of assistants, Harrison E. Spangler, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, former director of the Western division.

Hamilton Claims New York.

New York, June 18 (AP).—President Roosevelt's home State of New York was claimed for the Republicans by National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton tonight as he went over the situation with State and local leaders.

Commenting on Gov. Herbert H. Lehman's recent announcement that he would not seek a third term, Hamilton said:

"Landon and Knox will carry New York State whether Lehman runs or not."

"We're going to carry the East," Hamilton predicted. "I think Roosevelt ought to carry six of the 48 States. I'll be rather generous about that."

Hamilton said the party's outlook in the West had brightened since the Cleveland convention.

West "On Fire."

"The country out there is on fire," he said. "You haven't seen anything like the Middle West.

"We're going to carry the Mountain States and two at least on the coast, if not all three."

Published reports that the Democrats might try to prevail on Gov. Lehman to lend his vote-getting strength to their ticket by running again and then resigning if re-elected brought this comment from Hamilton:

"I think Mr. Roosevelt needs all the help he can get in New York State, and wouldn't blame him for trying to set up an artificial candidacy here.

"But neither Gov. Lehman nor anyone else can save Roosevelt in New York State."

By an "artificial candidacy," Hamilton said he meant one designed "not to serve the State, but to save Roosevelt's hide."

"The people are entitled to know who is going to be the actual Governor," he added.

In any event he said the question of whether Gov. Lehman ran again was relative, depending on who opposed him and what the issues were.

Politics and People

Maryland Draws Another New Deal Plum—Chester Davis, of Iowa and Chevy Chase.

By Franklyn Waltman

USUALLY when a juicy patronage plum in the shape of one of the major Federal jobs is dished out to the son of a given State, there is great rejoicing among the party leaders and faithful in that State. But this is not so in the case of Maryland Democrats.

WALTMAN.

It has become the custom for the Democratic leaders in Maryland to display amazement and chagrin when word comes from Washington that another "Marylander" has been honored by the New Deal. The reason is that the "Marylanders" selected for high office by the New Deal are not natives at all, but have only what amount to temporary residences in the Free State.

The latest incident of this sort was the appointment of "Chester C. Davis, of Maryland," as a member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System. This is the same Chester C. Davis who was, until lately, AAA administrator and a resident of Iowa. Since he has been associated with the New Deal, he has lived just over the boundary in Chevy Chase, Md., but he is no more a Marylander than the New York millionaires who spend the winter at Palm Beach and Miami are citizens of Florida.

But the Maryland Democratic leaders have become accustomed to having such appointments charged up to Maryland. They remember all the excitement caused by Democratic Chairman James A. Farley in 1933 when he announced that the Undersecretary of the Treasury would be a Marylander. But when the name was announced not one in 20 of the leaders of Maryland's Democracy had ever heard it before. The appointee was Dean G. Acheson, a native of Connecticut and a Washington lawyer, who, however, had a small farm up in Montgomery County.

Some months ago one of the Maryland leaders was complaining that the President had slighted the State in making major appointments. What did Maryland want, a representative of the New Deal demanded to know? Didn't Maryland have an Undersecretary of the Treasury, an Assistant Secretary of State, an Ambassador, an Assistant-Attorney General and general counsel of the Treasury?

The Maryland leader was dumfounded. Calling on the New Deal representative to explain, he learned that, in addition to Mr. Acheson, Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles, American Ambassador to Italy Breckinridge Long, former Assistant Attorney General William Stanley and Herman Oliphant, Treasury general counsel, were listed on New Deal patronage rolls as Marylanders.

Of the five, only Mr. Stanley was known to the Maryland leader—and he was never close to the dominant Democratic faction. Mr. Welles and Mr. Long were listed as Marylanders because they have summer homes in the State, while Mr. Oliphant was a professor at Johns Hopkins before coming to Washington.

And now Maryland gets another fat plum in the appointment of Mr. Davis, who, according to word from the Montgomery County seat, is not even a registered voter, although he has declared his intentions of becoming a citizen of the State and is eligible to vote this fall if he wishes.

The reason why Mr. Davis was listed as "of Maryland," instead of as "of Iowa," when his appointment was sent to the Senate undoubtedly was to circumvent the Federal Reserve act, which provides that not more than one member of the board of governors shall be selected from a given Federal Reserve district.

Iowa is in the Seventh District, which already was represented on the board by M. S. Szymczak, of Chicago. There was no representative from the Fifth Reserve District, which includes Maryland, so when the President decided to kick Mr. Davis upstairs, he named him as "of Maryland."

The purpose of the law in prescribing that not more than one governor should be named from a Reserve district was to establish a geographical balance and to give representation to the various shades of financial thought existing in this country. This purpose is nullified by the Davis appointment. Mr. Davis is primarily interested in agriculture and looks at current-day problems from the farmer's viewpoint.

The farmer, of course, should be represented on the board of governors, but what about the industrial and finanical community of the Middle Atlantic States which comprise the Fifth District, now represented by Mr. Davis?

Restoration this week by the Reserve Board of Governors of Owen D. Young to the directorate of the New York Federal Reserve Bank—after he had been booted out of that position last year under a new rule which limited the tenure of bank directors to six years—recalls reports that the General Electric chairman has become reconciled to the New Deal.

Mr. Young recently conferred at length with President Roosevelt and at the time it was rumored that he might take the leadership in forming an organization of business men in behalf of the Roosevelt candidacy. At all events, it looks like Mr. Young will be one of Mr. Roosevelt's ardent supporters this year.

Apropos of Postmaster General Farley's statement that his signature was placed on that letter soliciting funds from postmasters for tickets to be nominators at the Nation-wide Roosevelt acceptance party next week without his knowledge or consent—it is amazing how carelessly Jim lets the rubber stamp of his signature lie around. Remember his explanation about that letter indorsing Upton Sinclair's EPIC?

Republican Chairman John Hamilton last week told his national committee he would make mistakes because he intended doing things. He seems to be doing both, rather fast. Some of his keenest admirers raised their eyebrows on reading his statement that the Republican ticket would carry 42 States this year. Even if it were true, it would be a silly statement to make within a week after his candidate was nominated. Perhaps it may be excused on the ground of zeal and an effort to put some fight into the down-trodden Republican cohorts. But Mr. Hamilton should remember his greatest strength during the pre-convention campaign resulted from his policy of under-statement. Let him remember that the late Knute Rockne never predicted a victory for the Notre Dame team—and it seldom lost.

House Will Get Report on Tax Bill Tomorrow

normal 4 per cent income tax in the hands of shareholders.

Present exemption of 90 per cent of intercorporate dividends from taxation reduced to 85 per cent.

Banks and insurance companies subject to flat 15 per cent tax, and made exempt from undivided profits tax.

"Windfall" tax of 80 per cent on refunded and unpaid AAA processing taxes.

Trust Law Tightened.

Narrowing of loopholes in existing law relating to irrevocable trusts, in line with a recent interpretation by the Supreme Court on trusts revoked after death.

Lowering of tax on personal holding companies by 5 per cent. Rates formerly graduated from 13 to 53 per cent, now would range from 8 to 48 per cent.

Import tax on certain fish and vegetable oils.

Repealed jewelry tax.

Senate provision for increasing by

Tossed into the discard was the 1 per cent step-ups the surtax on individual incomes ranging between $6,000 and $50,000.

Although committee members insisted the new bill would yield in the neighborhood of $800,000,000, approximately the yield of the original House bill, tax items disclosed last night by experts would produce only approximately $785,000,000.

The new yields were totaled as follows:

Corporate Yield 630 Million.

Corporation taxes, plus repeal of dividend tax exemption, and continuation of capital stock tax at $1 per $1,000	$630,000,000
Tightening irrevocable trust tax	20,000,000
Encouraging holding company liquidation	33,000,000
"Windfall" tax of 80 per cent	82,000,000
Import taxes on certain oils	10,000,000
Foreign and miscellaneous taxes	10,000,000
Total	$185,000,000

It was a sweeping victory for the Administration, although it did not entirely meet the President's revenue desires. Mr. Roosevelt asked Congress for $620,000,000 in "permanent" revenue and $517,000,000 in "temporary" levies to be spread over a two or three year period. Ostensibly the revenue is to be used to meet the huge bonus costs and expenses of the new soil conservation program.

Committee spokesmen, however, insist the measure solves the revenue problem by providing more permanent revenue than the President requested. Virtually all of the items in the $785,000,000 tax bill yield "permanent" returns, except the $82,000,000 "windfall" levy, they contend.

Income Scale Approved.

Corporation income tax schedules, and the new range of rates on undivided profits, were approved by the conferees in the identical form reported in yesterday's Post.

Normal income taxes on corporations, left out of the House bill, but ranging from 15½ to 18 per cent in the Senate measure, were included in the final report on the insistence of Senate conferees that it would provide "tried revenue methods" where the undivided profits tax was admittedly experimental.

The corporation income rates range as follows:

Eight per cent on the first $2,000 or normal income.

Eleven per cent on the next $13,000.

Thirteen per cent on the next $25,000.

Fifteen per cent on corporate income in excess of $40,000.

This compares with existing corporate income rates graduated from 12½ to 15 per cent. As a concession to the small earning companies, the minimum rate in the present law was dropped 4 per cent, but the maximum rate was held at the same level.

The "compromise" schedule of rates on undivided profits compare with a flat supertax of only 7 per cent in the Senate bill, and a steep graduation up to 42½ per cent in the House bill. Coupled with the normal corporate income tax rates, however, they apparently are sufficiently sharp to satisfy the Administration, which seeks to force dividends into distribution through this route.

The new supertax rates are as follows:

7 per cent on the first 10 per cent of income retained.

12 per cent on the next 10 per cent of income retained.

17 per cent on the next 20 per cent.

22 per cent on the next 20 per cent.

27 per cent on corporate earnings retained in excess of 60 per cent.

The bill is studded with intended aids to small corporations, which led the brunt of the attack on the original House bill.

For example, corporations earning $50,000 and less would be given special treatment under the undivided profits tax schedule. The bill provides that the 7 per cent tax on the first 10 per cent of small company earnings should apply either to 10 per cent of earnings, or to $5,000, whichever is the larger. Thus a company in this category could retain $5,000 of earnings with assurance that it need not pay more than the 7 per cent tax. A company earning only $5,000 could withhold it all, and still pay only the 7 per cent tax.

Minor "cushions" are provided in the bill, but they offer little or no relief to the run of debt-laden corporations. Companies having contracts not to pay any dividends, however, would be exempted from the undivided profits tax, as would receivership corporations. Despite an appeal for special treatment, railroads would have to pay both normal and super-taxes, except that they would be extended the privilege of filing consolidated tax returns without penalty.

Foreign Firms Taxed.

A flat tax of 22 per cent would be imposed on foreign corporations doing business in the United States, and of 15 per cent if the company was not engaged in business here. Foreign individuals would pay a flat 10 per cent tax, withheld at the source, except, in the case of special treaty provisions with Canada and Mexico, foreigners in these contiguous countries would pay only 5 per cent.

Other provisions of the bill lower the existing fur tax from $10 to $3, eliminate a Senate provision which would have exempted from taxation insurance policies taken out to pay Federal estate taxes, and authorize a $42,000,000 payment to certain processors who suffered losses under AAA.

Senators Walsh and George in their joint statement said that while they recognize the need for levying, at this time, additional taxes on corporations and while they favor an increase in the present rates on the net incomes of corporations, they are unable to accept the principle of graduated supertaxes on undivided profits, in addition to normal income taxes.

They said their attitude is not one of obstructing the enactment of tax legislation and delaying adjournment of Congress, and therefore they intend to sign the conference report, in order that it may be presented to the House and Senate with their objections.

Call Tax Unfair.

In conference they took the position that this new tax principle was not just and equitable to the exceedingly large number of corporations which have just emerged from the depression "and whose surpluses have been wiped out due to the depression and in their desperate efforts to overcome their losses and threatened extinction."

"While there has been some evidence of a small number of corporations postponing or delaying distribution of earnings to protect a limited number of taxpayers from paying higher individual taxes, in their opinion, the overwhelming evidence presented was to the effect that imposition of heavy surtaxes on the undistributed earnings of surpluses of corporatons would be detrimental to the best interests of the country.

"Furthermore, the sane and prudent judgment exercised by most business concerns in maintaining surpluses of reasonable proportions should be encouraged and not discouraged, for ultimately the Government received taxes, which are certain to increase in the future, upon all surpluses through increases in the values of the stocks and bonds of such corporations and through large inheritance and estate taxes when the owners die.

Assail "Discrimination."

"This provision of the tax bill was both discriminatory and injurious toward the various classes of business. Businesses that now have large surpluses and no debts are distinctly favored. Businesses that are in debt and financially weak will be further weakened and in times of adversity or depression rapidly extinguished."

Climaxing 15 weeks of bitter controversy in both House and Senate, and a fortnight of conference deadlock, the bill was ordered reported yesterday at 5 p. m. As the conference adjourned, newspapermen were invited into the committee room by Chairman Doughton, and details of the "compromise" were explained by L. H. Parker and other committee tax experts.

Word of the tentative agreement had reached some newspapers 24 hours earlier. At a morning conference with reporters, Doughton had charged there was a "leak" in the committee.

French Reject Straus Appeal In New Strike

Workers for American Hospital Win Demand on Wages, Hours.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 18.—Striking workers at the American Hospital forced a quick victory tonight while official France made a firm thrust at "enimies of the regime."

Sixty hospital assistants, scrubwomen and other workers at the Neuilly-Sur-Seine institution won almost all their wage-hour demands in one day of intrenched idleness.

Meanwhile, the French Senate passed the 40-hour work week bill, completing legislative enactment of the new government's labor program.

Authorities at the hospital said they had to give in because the government, despite a personal appeal from Ambassador Jesse Isidor Straus to the strikers, refused to oust them by force until negotiation had been tried.

Doctors and nurses pitched in to scrub floors, clean rooms and cook meals for the 85 patients, mainly Americans, 23 of them in a serious condition.

On the political front the cabinet decreed quick dissolution of the Croix de Feu and three other Rightist leagues described as "combat groups." Reports from the leagues indicated difficulties ahead.

Premier Leon Blum's Socialist government moved also to remedy France's shaky financial condition.

Authorities sought repatriation of capital with a bill providing prosecution of Frenchmen who fail to declare what gold and securities they have abroad.

7-Day Gold Drain.

The cabinet approved a bill which would permit the General Federation of Labor and industrialists' corporations representation on the regents' council of the Bank of France.

A weekly Bank of France statement disclosed a new seven-day gold drain of 959,000,000 francs ($63,614,306).

The Senate all but completed parliamentary action on Blum's labor bills by approving a collective bargaining measure. The vote was 279 to 6.

Strikes, in their twenty-fourth day, still were widespread in France.

However, the first break in two weeks of occupation of idle department stores in Paris by their employes came with a settlement at one store, which will reopen Saturday.

Strikers still were in charge of plants in such widely scattered cities as Strasbourg, Rouen, Toulouse and Marseilles.

Frenchmen were beginning to feel the pinch of higher prices. Minister of the Interior Roger Salengro, Minister of Justice Marc Rucart and Minister of Economy Charles Spinasse will confer on that problem tomorrow.

The hospital employes promised to go back to work tomorrow after the wage-hour settlement was reached at a conference between the hospital board of governors and a delegation of strikers at the ministry of public health.

Agree to Increase.

Officials at the hospital, which was established in 1913 and now occupies one of the finest buildings in Paris, agreed to increase wages of workers to those prevailing in the city hospitals, to establish a 40-hour-week with two weeks' paid vacations, and to consider other demands.

The hospital heads declared the government had refused to oust the workers until part of the demands had been met, and then forced the strikers to accept a compromise under threat of expulsion from the premises.

However, they said they had reserved the right to close the institution "if it becomes necessary because of the new expense."

The four leagues ordered dissolved were the Croix de Feu, the League for French Solidarity, the Young Patriots and the Blue Shirt Francistes.

Col. Francois de la Rocque, the Croix de Feu leader who two days ago declared he would lead 700,000 militant followers "into political action" against leftist "disarray," cautioned his followers to be calm while he formulated his plans.

Woman Dies.

Brussels, June 18 (AP).—A woman died of excitement and five demonstrators were seriously injured as strike disorders swept over Belgium tonight.

The number of strikers reached a half-million and was swelling hourly. In a skirmish between strikers and the police at Quaregnon a woman fell dead and one demonstrator was seriously injured.

Oil tank blazes near Brussels resulted in serious injuries to four others. Reports received from Verviers said police were attacked by strikers there, and that strikers, in seeking to paralyze transportation, were destroying roads.

Street-car rails were torn up and communication lines cut by strikers at Quaregnon.

Prisoners Riot.

Madrid, June 18 (AP).—A heavy guard was thrown around munitions dumps and gunsmiths' shops tonight as strike disorders in the east and south threatened to spread.

Prisoners rioted in the Alcala de Henares Prison near Madrid. One prisoner was shot by guards and four guards were injured.

The inmates smashed windows and set fire to their beds. They demanded the release of several mates from underground cells.

Barcelona was placed further in the grip of a general strike when 100,000 store employes walked out. All business ceased in the Catalonian capital except in drug stores, bars and tobacco shops. Moving picture distributors joined the strike.

Under the glare of police spotlights, Albert Walter, jr., smokes a cigarette while he confesses to San Francisco detectives who arrested him for murder of Blanche Cousins, strangled with a silk stocking.

Former Convict Strangles Girl With Stocking

Sex Slayer Says He Lived 'to Get Revenge' on All Women.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, June 18.—From 28-year-old Albert Walter, police tonight claimed a bizarre confession of the "silk stocking" slaying of a red-haired girl which led them to reopen a strangely similar case of two years ago.

"I dedicated my life to vengeance against all women—I want to hang," Police Inspector George Engler quoted Walter. "I have done everything in my power to injure women."

Walter walked into a police station and led officers last night to a small apartment in the fashionable Knob Hill area, where they found the body of Miss Blanche Cousins, 24, of Idaho Falls, Idaho.

She had been garroted with a silk stocking and assaulted. Officers said Walter told them he did it because she had repulsed his advances.

Louise Jeppesen, 23, of Ogden, Utah, was strangled to death with a belt from her coat and was mistreated the night of May 13, 1934, in Golden Gate Park, not far from her living quarters.

Both girls were red-haired. Both had traveled here from their homes by bus in search of work.

Engler said he would check the marks on both bodies to determine whether they were made by the same assailant.

Walter, who said his wife was in New York City, asserted he was serving an Army desertion sentence on Alcatraz Island at the time of the Jeppesen killing, Engler said, however, Army records showed Walter was released from Alcatraz, while that island was still a military disciplinary barracks, July 26, 1933.

"I have ruined as many women as I could," Engler quoted Walter. "This killing is no surprise to me."

Walter said an incident when he was 14 years old caused him to turn against women, Engler added.

Walter said he met Miss Cousins on a bus bound for San Francisco and continued the acquaintance, going to her apartment Tuesday night for dinner.

They were sitting on a couch after dinner, Walter added, when Miss Cousins resisted him, "as she had done several times before."

"I became incensed," the statement to Engler continued. I choked her."

Soviet Denies Plea In Attack on Japan

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, June 18.—An aim to impose the Soviet regime on other countries, the government newspaper Izvestia said tonight, has been wrongly attributed to Moscow.

Answering a recent statement on Russo-Japanese relations by the Japanese minister of war, Count Juichi Terauchi, the paper said:

"The Japanese general apparently cannot understand the difference between sympathy for a cause of liberation of workers and peasants throughout the world and a desire to impose the Soviet regime on other countries."

The newspaper let it be known the Soviet Union has no intention of agreeing to a Japanese suggestion for the creation of a demilitarized zone 50 kilometers wide on each side of the Japanese-Manchukuan border.

Investigation Into Floggings Ordered by U.S.

Woman Says She Will File Charges in Arkansas Against Attackers.

By the Associated Press.

Little Rock, June 18.—A Federal inquiry into reported floggings in the east Arkansas cotton strike was ordered today while one of the alleged victims, a woman social service worker, said she would file charges against her assailants.

Attorney General Cummings directed Sam E. Whitaker, a special assistant, to question Miss Willie Sue Blagden, 29, of Memphis, and the Rev. Claude C. Williams, Presbyterian minister of Little Rock, who said they were beaten Monday night near Earle, Ark.

Cummings said a report on a previous investigation by Whitaker of "peonage" charges in the strike area would be withheld until the second inquiry is completed.

Miss Blagden said in Memphis she would ask Sheriff Howard Curlin, of Crittenden County, to make good his promise of protection and return to Earle to prefer the charges.

"I am sure I can identify the men," she said. "I only hope they haven't got scared and run out of Earle."

Curlin said he would investigate the charges, provided Miss Blagden or the minister would make formal complaint.

The sheriff reiterated he would produce Frank Weems, colored sharecropper who, strike leaders charge, was beaten to death.

Williams and Miss Blagden said they were flogged when they attempted to investigate reports of the man's death.

John D. Rust, Memphis inventor of a mechanical cotton picker, wrote President Roosevelt today asking an inquiry into the flogging charges.

Meanwhile, a man describing himself as Frank Rawlinson, 30, formerly of Columbia, S. C., charged here that he was beaten by four men Tuesday near Earle and ordered out of the State. He said he did not intend to prosecute, "but felt that my treatment should be known."

Hitler Reported Viewing British Query as Insult

Official Says Reply May Stress Peace Offers Previously Made.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 18.—A spokesman high in official circles tonight said Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler considered parts of the British Locarno questionnaire an insult.

Hitler, the spokesman added, also deemed it unwise to commit Germany to anything definite as long as international politics are in their present state of flux.

He may reply briefly and suddenly, this authority stated, stressing that the peace offers which he made when he remilitarized the Rhineland last March still stand and that he invites a concrete discussion of them.

Eden Waits Response.

(The British Locarno questionnaire was dispatched to Germany in an effort to clarify the Reich's attitude on maintenance of his existing territorial and political status in Europe. The British foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, told the House of Commons today that "a reassuring response" on whether Germany intends to respect that status would "signal a return to confidence in Europe."

The spokesman, who is in intimate contact with the situation, said a short and noncommittal reply to the questionnaire had been drafted less than a fortnight after its arrival.

Hitler and Baron Konstantin von Neurath, foreign minister, are both in Berlin at the same time for the first time in weeks. They have spent hours going over the whole international situation, including Soviet-Rumanian relations, Hapsburg restoration plans in Austria and the situation of Nazis in Austria.

Italy's Gestures.

Italy's gestures of friendship toward Germany, the spokesman intimated, more than anything is responsible for the conference between Hitler and Von Neurath.

Before the week is over, the spokesman intimated, Hitler may decide on one of four courses in regard to the British questionnaire. They are:

Send a brief reply already formulated; reply orally through the British ambassador, asserting an eastern Locarno Treaty is impossible and that "collective security" is a phrase that needs definition; inform Britain that Germany considers a reply unnecessary and undesirable, and finally, suggest that the British foreign minister visit Hitler to discuss the whole situation.

Free State Threat.

Dublin, Irish Free State, June 18 (AP).—President Eamon De Valera, threatened tonight that the Free State might withdraw from the League of Nations unless the League is "usefully reconstructed."

Jeers Greet Eden Plan

tions can only be maintained for some clearly defined and specific purpose. The only such purpose conceivable is the restoration in Ethiopia of a position which has been destroyed. * * * To maintain sanctions would only have this result—a crumbling of the sanctions front. * * * I do not believe it is in the interests of the League itself that the sanctions front should crumble in confusion.

"I must repeat the decision (to lift sanctions) which is to be taken is a League decision and His Majesty's government will, of course, concur in whatever view the Assembly as a whole adopts."

"We assured certain Mediterranean countries we would come to their aid in the event of their being attacked for the action they are taking under Article XVI. It is the view of the government that these assurances should not end with the raising of sanctions * * * I need hardly state I regard any such eventuality as those assurances cover as not only hypothetical but improbable.

"If the League is to have its best chances of success, then it must be organized on a basis which takes into account the lessons of the last few months * * * all minds must be turned actively to that task.

"Can the world succeed in reorganizing itself on a peace basis? I am convinced, despite events of the last few months, it can if it will.

"There is one aim on which we are all united—peace, not chaos, not catastrophe. Peace is the one essential need of the world.

"It is because I believe profoundly the policy I have outlined this afternoon is in the present anxious, difficult and critical situation, the one which is most likely to preserve peace, that I submit it with deep conviction and a full sense of responsibility."

Scientists Study Eclipse

reports of what discoveries the scientists made of the sun's mysteries today, beginning at 1:30 p. m. (E. S. T.). At this hour a report will be heard from the Harvard-Tech group, over the National Broadcasting Co.'s network. This will end at 1:45, and then, over the same hookup, Dr. McNally, of the Geographic-Georgetown Expedition, will speak until 2 p. m.

These astronomers will describe the scientific phenomena they beheld when the moon blotted out the sun for two minutes, making visible the huge corona, that halo of pearly light which surrounds the sun, but can be seen only at times of total eclipse.

North America to Hear.

Preliminary reports of their observations also will be disclosed to listeners-in in North America.

The broadcast will be relayed to Moscow, and then sent to the entire world.

Weather reports from the Soviet Capital last night were varied, and clouds, officials said, might curtail or prevent the observation.

Dense rain clouds were reported in a large part of the eclipse zone, but at Akbulak the sky had cleared after two days of dismal downpour which might mean waste of weeks of work and much money.

In the Kustanai region, about 400 miles away, where the Geographic-Georgetown group is stationed, weather conditions also were hazardous. This expedition was receiving radio time signals from the Arlington National Observatory.

Photos 20,000 Feet Up.

Soviet scientists, however, the Associated Press reported, were equipped with cameras which will make it possible to photograph the corona from a height of about 20,000 feet above the clouds.

The Russians, the Associated Press asserted, have two airplanes and one enormous stratosphere balloon ready at Krasnoyarks, five airplanes at Belorechenskaya and one balloon at Krasnodar. All these craft are equipped with special photographic devices.

By way of contrast, and remembering the stampede of illiterate kulaks at the last total eclipse, which occurred in the Russia of the Czars, back in 1887, the Soviet Government sent hundreds of special agents among the peasants in the zone of impending darkness.

Primary purpose, of course, was to dispel the ancient superstition that blackening of the sun was an omen of impending war.

"Such signs are invented by the clergy to intimidate ignorant people," the Government lecturers said, according to the Associated Press.

Urged to See Instruments.

The peasants were urged to look at the scientific instruments of observation, which included a self-deflating, passengerless balloon, which was to be sent up in the North Caucasus to explode some 50,000 feet in the air, returning automatic instruments to earth in parachutes.

A prediction of clear weather at Kamishari, on Hokkaido Island, Japan, cheered observers yesterday.

Hundreds of sightseers and reporters poured through the remote mountain town and overhead airplanes of Japanese newspapermen roared.

The natives, Japanese pioneers and Ainus, prepared for their traditional rites to the eclipse—throwing water in the direction of the sun to revive it.

Bow to Strangers.

They bowed and greeted the strangers from a world they did not know in their strange Oriental dialect.

Things the Ainus and the primitive people of Siberia, also, did not understand was that the moon will be 231,400 miles from the earth and the sun 94,500,000 away from the earth at the time of the eclipse.

Hence the shadow of the moon will obliterate the disc of the sun, despite the fact it is 865,000 miles in diameter, as against 2,160 for the moon.

Eckener in Full Charge On Hindenburg Flight

Friedrichshafen, Germany, June 18 (AP).—When the Zeppelin Hindenburg leaves tomorrow night on its third flight to the United States, Dr. Hugo Eckener, veteran dirigible expert, will be in full charge.

His assignment is at the special request of the air ministry made, it was said, to appease public opinion in the United States at Dr. Eckener's previous treatment by the Nazi propaganda department.

Nazi-Lithuanian Pact Talks Due Next Month

Kaunas, Lithuania, June 18 (AP).—Negotiations for a nonaggression pact between Germany and Lithuania, based on proposals submitted by Adolf Hitler personally, will take place in Berlin next month, reliable sources indicated today.

The Lithuanian press received a warning from the government not to criticize German policy in order to prepare the "right atmosphere" for the talk.

Landon Orders Pension Plan Special Session

Kansas Legislators Will Consider Amendment to Constitution.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., June 18.—Gov. Alf M. Landon today called a special session of the Kansas Legislature for July 7 to initiate a proposed constitutional amendment to enable State participation in all phases of the Federal social security program.

A proposed amendment has been drafted by the legislative council.

Gov. Landon's call will bring the Legislature to Topeka the day following his return from a vacation in Estes Park, Colo.

The Republican Presidential nominee announced today he would leave Wednesday, returning July 6. No speeches were planned en route and the Governor said he did not expect to receive any callers while away.

At Denver, the Governor was assured of "any kind of vacation he wants" by Lawrence C. Phipps, sr., Republican national committeeman from Colorado.

Facilities Enlarged.

Telephone and telegraph company officials were busy enlarging facilities at Estes Park village, 75 miles northwest of Denver.

The work of the Legislature will be confined to consideration of the proposed amendment to enable the State to enter "a broad, comprehensive program" in social security work, Gov. Landon said.

He pointed out that major phases of the social security program could not be set up in Kansas until the constitution has been broadened to extend this authority to the State.

At present the State constitution places responsibility for care of the poor on the counties, a feature which caused the Federal Social Security Board to reject a plan for participation submitted by Kansas officials several months ago.

Vote in November.

Any amendment submitted by the Legislature would be voted on at the general election next November and, if adopted, would be effective at the regular biennial legislative session the following January.

Under present regulations the only phases of the social security program in which Kansas can participate are those extending aid to the blind, to crippled children and the maternal aid program.

The Governor declined to venture a guess as to the probable length of the special session. He does not have authority to limit the legislators to any particular business, but the lawmakers themselves can do so by resolution.

Notification Undecided.

No announcement was forthcoming today on the time and place for Landon's notification ceremonies but the Governor indicated he would have an announcement before starting on his vacation.

Mrs. Landon, Nancy Jo and John Cobb, two young children of the Governor and Mrs. Landon; Peggy Ane, the Goveror's 19-year-old daughter, and Mrs. S. E. Cobb, Mrs. Ladon's mother, will accompany him on the trip to Estes Park.

Among the Landon visitors today was Dr. Thomas M. Williams, Palo Alto, Calif., friend and neighbor of former President Hoover. Asked if there was any significance to the visit, the Governor said he knew of none.

Will Nominate Roosevelt Again

Congress Speeds Adjournment

that we shall get out of here sometime Saturday night," Senator Robinson, majority leader, said.

He said there was no intention of bringing up any important legislation except the Guffey bill and the tax bill.

Relief funds appropriated by the deficiency bill will be available July 1. They will be allotted by President Roosevelt, subject to earmarking contained in the bill.

The bill also provides for continuation of the District of Columbia Alley Dwelling Authority. Its passage also assures pay for 4,200 employes of the National Park Service, who were not paid June 15 because of delay in passing the measure.

Another money bill, the Interior Department appropriation, finally was accepted by the Senate yesterday and sent to the White House. It carried an appropriation of $120,000,000. In addition, the Senate jmmed through 86 personal and minor measures, all without a record vote.

The Wagner housing bill, which authorizes expenditure of $460,000,000 for slum clearance housing, still was in the House Banking and Currency Committee with little hope that it could be enacted.

The Robinson-Patman anti-price-fixing bill would permit the Federal Trade Commission to limit the amount prices could be cut for quantity purchses and would outlaw brokerage and other fees for the express purpose of price discrimination.

An amendment by Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, and Senator VanNuys (Democrat), of Indiana, permits persons who believe they have been discriminated against to take their cases to Federal District Courts instead of to the Federal Trade Commission.

Among other measures passed by the Senate were:

A resolution authorizing the Department of Agriculture to make a study of ways to avoid highway accindents.

A conference report increasing the authorized air strength of the Army from 1,800 to 2,320 planes.

A bill providing that witnesses who refuse to testify before Congressional committees may be brought before Federal courts directly without action by either House of Congress.

A bill increasing by $1,942,000 the pensions of 15,080 veterans.

A bill providing a $1,000 fine and a jail sentence for persons carrying liquor into dry States.

In spite of stiff opposition to the ship subsidy bill, led by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri; Senator Robinson predicted that not more than 10 to 15 Senators would vote against it.

Clark originally had indicated he would filibuster against the bill, but he withdrew the threat. He said that while he was against the measure, he believed it was better than the present system of ocean mail contracts.

With agitation against alleged use of postoffices for political purposes continuing, there was a move to bring up legislation putting first, second and third-class postmasters under civil service. It is doubtful, however, whether action can be taken.

SEC Asks Law For Rigid Rule Of Trusteeships

Douglas' Congress Report Assails 'Exploitation' of the Investor.

By Sidney Olson.

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday called on Congress to impose new and much more rigid standards for corporate trustees.

Commissioner William O. Douglas, in a savage attack on the present system of unregulated trusteeships, said:

"The leading bankers of the country have been sitting idly by while the investors have been exploited."

In a 119-page report, prepared under the direction of Douglas, the commission outlined a long series of abuses now "rampant" in the trustee system, and proposed a correspondingly lengthy set of regulations to protect investors in the future.

Douglas, unsparing in his condemnation, pictured the situation as one in which the trustees left the interests of the investors unguarded while laboring to protect their own interests in corporations under trusteeship.

"Grabbed Assets."

He declared that cases were known in which the trustees, also creditors of corporations, had heard in advance of pending defaults and "grabbed every asset they could get their hands on" to protect their own interests.

The commission, among many conclusions, found primarily that:

"It is necessary in the public interest and for the protection of investors, first, that the trustees under these indentures be disqualified from acting or serving if they have or acquire conflicts of interest incompatible or inconsistent with their fiduciary obligations; and, second, that they be transformed into active trustees with the obligation to exercise that degree of care and diligence which the law attaches to such fiduciary position."

Holding that its present powers are inadequate to effect the proposed reforms, the commission stated:

"Uniform legislation by Congress is accordingly necessary."

Would Curb Exploitation.

The report states that the point of control should be, as in the 1933 securities act, at the public offering of the securities. There minimum standards for indentures would be set up, under which the securities could be issued, along with qualifications for the trustees.

In a straightforward argument for stiffer standards imposed by legislation in this field, the report said:

"Such measures would go far toward curbing the exploitation of investors which has occurred either at the hands of the trustee itself or at the hands of the reorganization and management groups with the knowledge, consent or acquiescence of a complacent and inactive trustee.

"The result would be that investors would have an active guardian of their interests throughout the entire life of the security. * * * In view of the history of exploitation of investors under present trust indentures any less rigid requirement would be inadequate. There can be no permanency of integrity and confidence in this field unless those in control of other people's investments are held to high fiduciary standards of conduct."

Abuses Are Listed.

The findings included:

"1. The trustee is merely a mechanical agency, a sort of bookkeeping agency, affording little real protection to bondholders.

"2. Shrewdly worded negative pledge clauses in trust indentures have permitted the pledged assets to be whisked away from the investors while the trustees have stood by idly.

"3. Complacent and inert trustees have permitted release and substitution of collateral, resulting in the dilution of the assets behind the bonds.

"4. Trustees have even failed to ascertain that the title to the property behind the bonds is properly recorded and the securities properly certified.

"5. The trustee not only assumes no obligation to make sure that the proceeds from the sale of the bonds are applied as stated by the issuer, but protects itself from the consequences of misapplication of the proceeds by the issuer by the insertion of exculpatory clauses in the indenture."

"Timid and Ineffective."

(The Commission said that in a majority of instances the trustee is under no obligation to perform this service and exercises little supervision.)

"6. Trustees commonly neglect their duty to inform bondholders of failure to pay taxes, interest, principal or sinking fund requirements.

"7. Timidity and ineffectiveness have characterized the activities of the trustee in behalf of the bondholders.

"8. The trustee has not been an energetic champion of the minorities in reorganizations but has allied itself with the protective committees representing the dominant interests.

"9. The normal trust indenture fairly bristles with exculpatory clauses giving full legal relief to the trustee for all responsibility except for its own neglect or bad faith.

"10. The courts have admitted that there is no law protecting the investor against the low standards of trusteeship embodied in the average trust indenture, and that legislation is the only solution."

Condemned by Judge.

The report cited a statement by Judge Rosenman in a New York Supreme Court in a power company case, in which the judge said:

"The cruel fact is that not only is the trustee not required to exercise that greater skill and watchfulness and prudence which it has, but it is even absolved from exercising merely the ordinary care which a single individual should exercise as to his own affairs."

In a further section of the report the commission made two more points on the conflict of interests of trustees:

"1. The present system of corporate trusteeships is honeycombed with conflicting affiliations and interlocking relationships which cannot but emasculate the trusteeship.

"2. Commercial banks serving the trustees are often also direct creditors or controlling stockholders of the issuing company."

Ickes, Thomas Assail Platform Of Republicans

Mack at White House; Cannon Gives Likely Parley Procedure.

By the Associated Press.

A bombardment was directed at the Republican Party platform from two quarters here yesterday as high-ranking Democrats continued the shaping of planks to be submitted to their party's national convention in Philadelphia next week.

Secretary Ickes described the Republican statement of principles as filled with "ambiguous phrases, weasel words and language running both ways." He predicted that they "won't have a chance to carry it out."

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, also made public an "analysis" of the platform, describing it as "a hodge-podge" which does "some rare straddling" and is filled with inconsistencies and "fraud."

Meanwhile, Judge John E. Mack, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Democratic National Committeeman, who will nominate Franklin D. Roosevelt for the second time when the Democrats meet at Philadelphia, had lunch at the White House.

Judge Mack told newsmen he had "talked over" the nominating speech, but declined any comment other than that he "hoped to ring the bell."

On still another front, Representative Cannon (Democrat), Missouri, who has acted as parliamentarian at Democratic conventions for 16 years, predicted that President Roosevelt will be nominated by acclamation and without the formality of a ballot.

Grover Cleveland in 1888 was the last Democrat to be honored by his party with nomination by acclamation.

Cannon said he expected the nominating procedure to be:

1. Call of the roll by States with 30 minutes alloted for each nominating speech.

2. Motion to suspend the rules for acclamation.

3. Call of the roll by States for Vice Presidential nomination with 5 minutes allotted for speeches.

4. Motion to suspend the rules for acclamation.

In a statement, Thomas declared "the romantic view" that the Republican Party had been reborn at Cleveland "is rather absurd in view of the candidate, the platform itself, and all the attendant circumstances."

The "very hard-boiled and cynical" view, he said, that "really nothing has changed, that the Liberty League, William Randolph Hearst, and every other protagonist of reaction and possible fascism won at Cleveland" is "nearer the truth."

108 Pupils Graduated At Cumberland School

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., June 18.—Pennsylvania Avenue High School graduated a class of 108 this afternoon.

The Rev. Edward P. Heinze, pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church, gave the religious numbers. Jeanne Arthur wrote the class oration, "Democracy, Our Birthright," which was delivered by Harold Clifford.

The musical features were presented by the school orchestra, the girls' sextet and a cappella choir.

Dr. Charles F. Sanders, of Gettysburg College, gave the address. The diplomas were presented by William A. Gunter, president of the board of education. Honors were announced by Victor D. Heisey, principal.

Two-Thirds Rule Fight

to Bennett Clark on how the will of the majority can be thwarted by rules. He will come to Philadelphia ready to battle to the limit to scrap the rule.

It will be the one big fight of the convention. There is little dissent on the platform among early arrivals. Most of them expect planks indorsing the objectives of New Deal legislation with particular emphasis on Mr. Roosevelt's "forgotten man" theme of 1932.

President Roosevelt's renomination is assured, of course, and tonight there was talk that it would not even be necessary to take a ballot—that he and Vice President John N. Garner would win by acclamation. That will not be settled until Farley returns to town tomorrow or the next day.

Philadelphia has the flags up, and hotel space is getting scarce. Extra men are being put to work in the hotels and today's worry was where to get competent bartenders for the convention rush. Hotel men explained that they wanted real bartenders—"not just men who can draw a glass of beer" because the Southerners were expected to demand such exotic drinks as "Stonewall Jacksons." Rumor says a "Stonewall Jackson" is some combination of Scotch and blackberry juice, but no one here is certain.

Maxim Gorky Dies in Russia Of Pneumonia

Soviet's Outstanding Writer Was Ill 10 Days; Funeral Rites Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, June 18.—Maxim Gorky, one-time ragpicker who became Russia's outstanding writer, died today of pneumonia. He was 68.

The world-famous novelist had been ill for ten days. Russia's leading physicians had kept him alive for the last 24 hours by stimulants and applications of oxygen.

Gorky had only one lung, the other having been destroyed by a tuberculosis infection after he shot himself in a suicide attempt as a youth. Pneumonia set in in the single lung, following an attack of influenza.

Gorky had a private residence here—a privilege accorded only a few. Recently he had been writing plays, and articles for newspapers in which he severely criticized young Soviet writers for a lack of imagination and failure to develop a "revolutionary" school of writing.

Moscow, plunged into mourning by the writer's death, made plans for a public funeral ceremony to be held in Red Square Saturday. It will constitute a huge popular demonstration of the respect and admiration in which Gorky is held. His body will be placed in a niche of the wall of the Kremlin facing the tomb of Lenin.

Gorky died shortly before noon at his home just outside Moscow, where Lenin lived at the time of his fatal illness.

Mourning flags were displayed throughout the capital.

Gorky was the second world figure of letters to die this week, his death following by five days that of G. K. Chesterton, of England.

George Bernard Shaw, told in London of Gorky's death, said: "I dare say it's time for all us nineteenth century writers to clear out. You'd better prepare my obituary."

Literary Giant.

Maxim Gorky was the literary giant of the Russian Revolution.

His novels, plays and short stories in behalf of social justice for the proletariat brought him official recognition from both the Czarist regime and the Communist government.

The Czarists imprisoned him several times and finally drove him into exile. He spent his declining years in the sunny climate of Italy fighting consumption which he contracted in an imperialist jail.

The Communists made him a member of the central executive committee of the Soviet Union and director of the Institute of Russian literature of the Soviet Academy of Science and named a city, museum and giant airship in his honor.

Foe of Bolsheviks.

But Gorky was not always in complete sympathy with the Bolsheviks. After the overthrow of Kerensky he bitterly attacked them in daily signed editorials, ceasing only after the personal intervention of Lenin, a friend of long standing.

Bitterness is the key to his career. His pen name is derived from "gor'kii," which means "the bitter one." It was that quality which made him attempt suicide long before his name became known throughout the world.

He was only 19 then. But life had been cruel beyond endurance.

Alexei Maximovich Pyeshkov was born in a dark two-room cellar home in Nizhni-Novgorod, March 14, 1868. At 4 he contracted cholera, but recovered after a narrow escape. His father, a journeyman upholsterer, caught the disease from him and died.

This blow turned into a temporary boon. His mother took him from the squalid quarters to live with his maternal grandparents. But the lad had to help eke out a subsistence for his poverty-stricken family by spending his hours after school searching the streets and garbage can for bits of rubbish and scraps of iron.

His brothers and sisters taunted him with the nickname of "ragpicker." They refused to sit near him because of his smell.

The privilege of schooling was not given him for long. When the lad was 9 his mother died. His grandfather, a dyer whose affairs had gone from bad to worse, threw him out of the house. From then on he had to earn his own living.

Lived Wanderer's Life.

For 15 years he wandered all over the east and south of Russia as a cobbler's apprentice, errand boy, draftsman's assistant, dishwasher on a Volga steamer, clerk to a lawyer, day laborer and tramp on the steppes.

Sometime during this period he learned to read and write and acquired a passion for knowledge. From then on he devoured every book he could lay his hands on. This indefatigable reading and the remarkable knowledge of the Russian people gained during his years of knocking about, gave him the rich background for his later writing.

At 15 he went to the university town of Kazan, naively believing that an eagerness to learn and a willingness to study were all the qualifications needed to be admitted. When he was turned down he got a job in a bakery shop.

It was four years later that these series of misfortunes got the better of him and he decided to end it all. He shot himself. Carried to the hospital with a bullet through his lung, he hovered between life and death for days. An operation saved him, but the bullet remained in his body and gave him trouble in later years.

This was the turning point in his life. Vladimir Korolenko, who had already achieved an outstanding reputation as a novelist, befriended him. He recognized the youth's genius and urged him to write.

Sold Piece to the Paper.

While working in a railway shop in Tiflis four years later, he sold a piece to a local newspaper under the name which he later made famous. This gave him his start as a provincial journalist.

From then on his star rose rapidly. Gorky began to write about his experiences and the poor people he had met during his extensive journeys over Russia.

Three years later, in 1895, a leading St. Petersburg review accepted his story, 'Chelkash," later translated into English as "Russian Wealth." This was followed by a series of tales on the life of the tramp—the "bosniaki."

The success of these when published in book form two years later was unprecedented. Gorky found himself placed by the public on a level with Tolstoi. Before long his name had crossed the frontier and he became a world celebrity.

He fell under the influence of Chekhov, who persuaded him to write plays. One of these, "The Lower Depths," ran for two years in Berlin. It was tried 30 years later on Broadway under the name of "At the Bottom," but turned out to be too heavy for fun-loving America and had to be taken off the boards after a two-week run.

From boyhood Gorky had taken an interest in the revolutionary movement. He worked his ideas into his writings and joined the Social-Democratic Party. His activities in its behalf soon brought police persecution but that only enhanced his following among the people.

He then turned directly to anti-government propaganda and spent the next few years in and out of jail. Finally after the Bloody Sunday of January, 1905, which marked the beginning of the first Russian revolution, he was exiled.

The next year he went to Berlin, Paris and New York to carry on an anti-Czarist campaign. This country at first gave him the lavish welcome it showers on most foreign literary lions. But soon the word got around that his traveling companion was not really Mme. Gorky but Mlle. Andreievea. Society froze. Teas were called off. New York hotels refused to admit him.

Finally he was asked to leave. He returned to Europe bitter about the United States, retired to a villa on Capri, the beautiful isle in the Bay of Naples, and married Mlle. Andreievea. He never got over his animostity toward this country. Despite repeated invitations, he never returned.

Trained Revolutionists.

In 1907 he was a delegate to the Congress of the Russian Social-Democratic Party in London. The next few years he devoted to its cause, writing and running a school in Capri to educate Russian workers and professional revolutionists. His friendship with Lenin dates from this period. They kept up a friendly exchange of letters on the progress of the revolution.

Czar Nicholas included the writer in his amnesty of 1913 and the following year Gorky returned to his native land. When the war broke out, he swallowed his pacifist convictions in favor of his Marxist hatred of imperialist Germany and enlisted as a private. He was several times under fire in Galicia.

In 1917 he returned to the revolutionary front as an editorial writer for his previously suppressed publication, "Free Life." It was in this that he let loose his vitriolic blasts against the Bolsheviks when they wrested control from Kerensky.

Soon, however, he was in the Communist camp, first as chief of the bureau of propaganda, then, with his wife, in the department of education. He was elected a member of the Petrograd Soviet and worked hard throughout the terrible faminine of 1921-22 aiding in relief.

During these years he became the chief champion of culture in the new regime and did much to alleviate the hardships of the intellectual classes as well as to preserve cultural treasures.

Retired Ill, to Italy.

His health broke down under the strain and he was forced to retire to a villa in Sorrento, Italy, where he spent most of the rest of his life, returning only a few times to his native land—always to be received everywhere with great ovations.

He did not retire to a life of leisure. Despite his years and ill-health, Gorky was tall, erect and youthfully slender. He worked at his writing indefatigably, rising at 7 in the morning and often laboring far into the night. He kept his boundless energy and joy of living up to the end.

His literary career divides into three periods. The first is that of his short stories. It was the mixture of outspoken realism and romantic gusto with which he treated his tramps and thieves that gained him his entrance into the heart of all Russia. "My Fellow Traveler" and "Twenty-six Men and a Girl" are considered masterpieces.

The second period began at the turn of the century when he started writing long novels and plays in which he attempted a comprehensive picture of Russian life and a solution of the burning social problems of the day. Though his people always lived. Gorky never succeeded in handling those media as well as he did the short story. The plays especially are said to be hopelessly formless.

The third period is considered his best, when he turned to autobiography. The most widely acclaimed of these latter works was a trilogy "Childhood," (published just before the war), followed by "In the World" and "Reminiscences of My Youth"—and a volume of "Recollections" (1920), which contains the famous "Recollections of Tolstoi."

Perhaps to his countrymen this bitter idealist will be inseparably linked with the revolution. But the world will remember Gorky as the creator of a vast gallery of Russian characters, unmatched either for penetration or realism in their portrayal.

Borah Reported Eager to Seek His Seat Again

Pocatello Tribune Quotes Letter Denouncing Return to Gold.

By the Associated Press.

Pocatello, Idaho, June 18.—The Pocatello Tribune said today Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, has written that he is "willing and rather anxious" to seek re-election—because of questions involved in the coming campaign.

The veteran statesman expressed himself, the paper said, in a letter to R. P. Parry, Idaho Republican State chairman. Parry could not be reached immediately.

The letter, as made public by the Tribune, said Borah was writing to make plain his position in case Idaho Republicans should wish "to agree upon another candidate in view of Borah's stand on the Republican monetary plank."

In Washington the Senator refused to comment.

Borah, since he left the Cleveland convention after hammering pet planks into the platform, had withheld definite announcement of whether he would again seek the Senate seat he has held 30 years.

The Idahoan previously had made clear that he bitterly opposes "a return to the gold standard"—reiterating his views after the Republican conclave—and the copy of the letter received by the Tribune said:

"It seems probable that the money question will be one of the important issues in this campaign.

"If I should be a candidate for re-election to the Senate, I would exercise full freedom of views and of discussion on that subject. While I fully accept the declaration of the Republican platform that we should maintain a sound currency at all hazards, I do not accept the view that a sound currency means a return to the gold standard.

Foresees Hardships.

"To return to the gold standard or even to make an effort to do so would, in my view, work almost incalculable injury to our country, and particularly, to agriculture and producers generally. I shall not at this time go into detail. But I feel that I ought to advise you and other Republicans of my position. It seems, as I said some weeks ago, that in this campaign the candidates are to be the platforms and such will be my position in the campaign. • • •

"The present extraordinary and unusual economic and political conditions seem to invite and justify a wide discretion as to the personal views on the part of candidates. I recognize this right in others and I must retain it for myself.

"I hope you will advise all Republicans of my position to the end that we may avoid all misunderstandig after the campaign opens."

8 Convicts Face Murder Charge

Richmond, Va., June 18 (AP).—Commonwealth's Attorney T. Gray Haddon said today he would ask Circuit Judge Julien Gunn to empanel a special grand jury to return murder indictments against eight long-term convicts whose futile dash for liberty at the State Penitentiary cost the life of a guard.

Judge Gunn was not in his office, but Walker C. Cottrell, court clerk, said he did not expect a grand jury would be called before July 4.

Haddon said the murder charge would hinge on an allegation of conspiracy by which the convicts placed Powhatan Bass, a guard, in a position of jeopardy in which he lost his life. Bass was shot dead by another guard, C. H. Smith, who did not know the convicts had seized his fellow officer and were carrying him as a hostage in the truck in which they intended to batter down a prison gate.

Suit on 'Rasputin' Is Lost by Russian

New York, June 18 (AP).—Sergius M. Trufanoff, once known as "Iliodor, the Mad Monk of Russia," lost his $100,000 libel suit today against the publishers of the book, "Rasputin: The Holy Devil," in which Iliodor charged his character was defamed.

Counsel for Iliodor, in his closing argument, charged that the book, written by Rene Fulop-Miller, depicted his client "as a cheap, filthy, disgusting, horrible creature," and declared that "the laws of this country hold that one cannot just print of a living person things that will make it (a book) sell."

In reply, counsel for the defendants, the Viking Press and Garden City Publishing Co., publishers of the book, contended that every statement about Iliodor contained in the book was true and authenticated.

Half-Hour Strike Paralyzes Mexico

Mexico City, June 18 (AP).—The Confederation of Workers of Mexico again demonstrated its grip on the nerve centers of Mexican industry today by a half-hour general strike.

The walkout was called to protest the government's action in breaking the Mexican National Railways strike one month ago today. It involved some 500,000 C. T. M. (confederation) members throughout the nation.

While such vital public services as telegraphs, mails, water plants and hospitals were excepted, lights and power were cut off for 15 minutes and trains rolled to stops wherever the "zero hour" caught them.

Vicente Lombardo Toledano, C. T. M. secretary general, called it "the first real general strike in the history of the country" and said it proved "the unexampled discipline of the proletariat."

First reports indicated the walkout was orderly. The government chose to ignore it. The only incidents in the capital were the forcible stoppage of private automobiles and the dousing with water of a police major who sought to drive through strike lines.

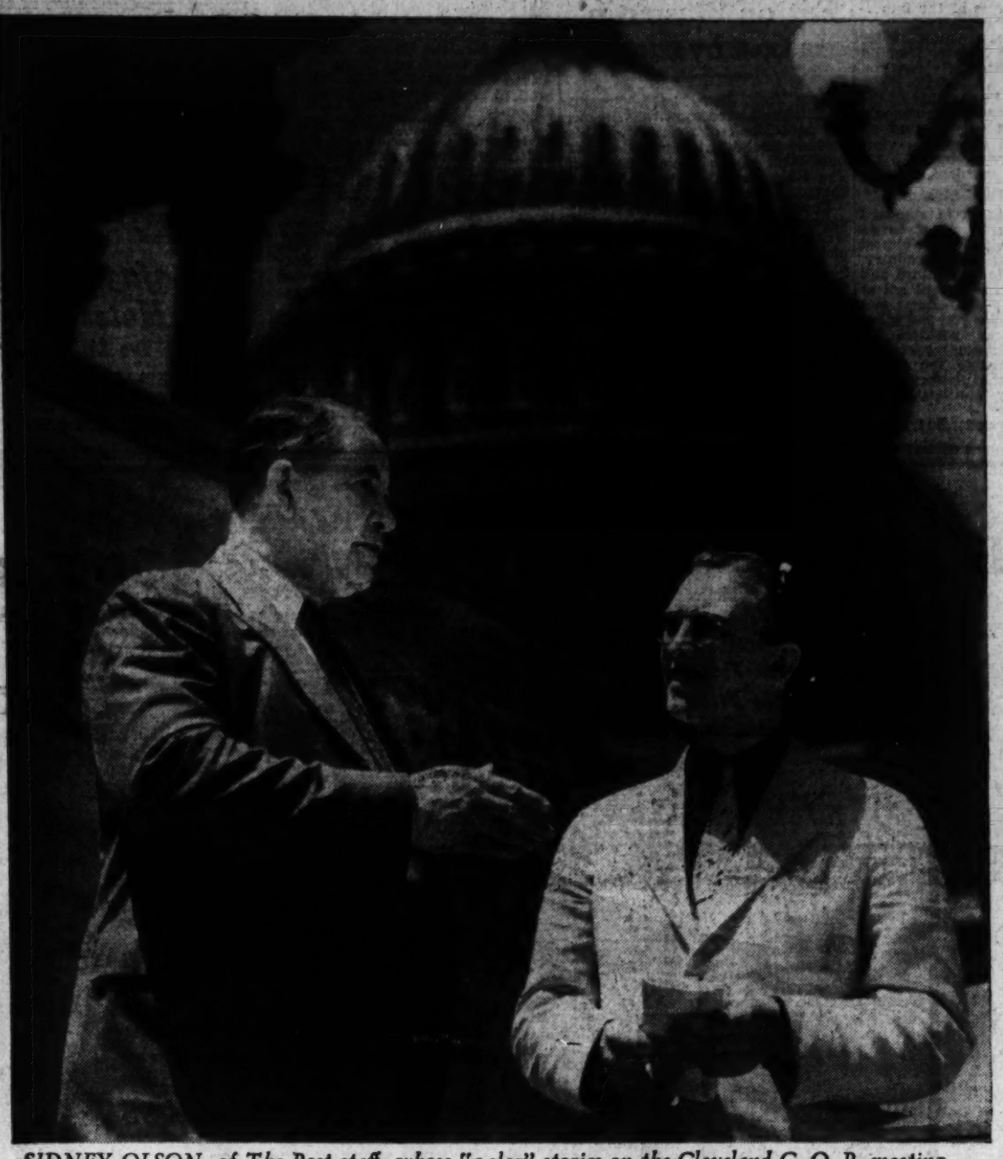
And Now, to Philadelphia...with The Post



SIDNEY OLSON, of The Post staff, whose "color" stories on the Cleveland G. O. P. meeting so graphically reproduced the mass events of the convention for Post readers, chats in the shadow of the Capitol's dome with Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, keynoter and temporary chairman of the coming Democratic pow-wow.

WHEN THE G. O. P. convened at Cleveland, when the keynote address was given, when cheering delegates greeted the speech of former President Hoover, when resolutions and platform were adopted, nominating speeches made and Gov. Landon of Kansas and Col. Knox, of Chicago, selected to head the Republican ticket . . . readers of The Washington Post had front row seats at the proceedings.

FOR, THE POST had sent a staff of its own, regular political writers, reporters and commentators to bring the convention . . . in intimate, accurate detail . . . back to the Nation's Capital.

AND NOW, WITH the Philadelphia meeting of the Democratic Party only a few days away, The Post again is sending its own staff to cover the convention. Supplemented by dispatches from the Associated Press, the United Press, Westbrook Pegler's special convention columns and pictures by Wirephoto, The Post's coverage will bring its readers a complete picture of all of the activities of the Democratic Convention.

FELIX MORLEY, Editor of The Post, who . . . as at Cleveland . . . will write his editorials on the scene at Philadelphia.

FELIX BRUNER, who has covered, during the past three years, almost every angle of the New Deal for The Post, is caught in a jocular moment with Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, majority leader of the Senate, and permanent chairman of the convention.

FRANKLYN WALTMAN, Chief of the National News Staff of The Washington Post and author of the daily column, "Politics and People," is pictured above in a pre-convention interview with Postmaster General James A. Farley, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Navy to Honor Duff, Chaplain Chief, Sunday

First Catholic to Hold Post Brought Unknown Soldier's Body Home.

Capt. Edward A. Duff, chief of Navy chaplains, who brought the body of the unknown soldier to this country, will observe the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination as a Catholic priest Sunday at Philadelphia, his birthplace.

A guard of honor composed of 100 blue jackets and marines will line the Church of St. John the Evangelist, where clergymen and naval officers from various parts of the country will assemble to do him honor.

The Most Rev. Hugh Lamb, Auxiliary Bishop of Philadelphia, will preside at the mass, while the Most Rev. Bishop Francis C. Kelley, a former Army chaplain during the Spanish-American War, will preach the sermon.

Andrews to Speak.

At a dinner after the mass, Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, will deliver the principal address. Among those present will be Rear Admiral Watts, commandant of the Fourth Naval District; Rear Admiral Percival Rossiter, surgeon general of the Navy; Col. Alva J. Brasted, chief of the Army chaplains, and the following Navy chaplains:

Commanders Joseph J. Casey and John W. Moore, Lieut. Comdrs. Albert Vogler and Joseph H. Brooks, and Lieuts. C. M. Sitler, J. M. Hughes, Emmet O'Neill, Michael Hally and Augustus Hohl.

In the Navy service since 1915, Father Duff has served aboard numerous warships, including the Illinois, Salem, Constellation, Nevada, Melville, Pittsburgh, New York and Wyoming. During the war he was on the staff of Admiral Sims at Navy headquarters in London.

Directed Morale Work.

After the war, as force welfare officer with headquarters at Paris, he had active charge of all morale work at the various naval stations in Europe. He was attached to the Navy-Marine Corps graves registration unit at Paris, paying regular visits to cemeteries, where American soldiers and sailors were being buried.

When Congress decided to have the body of an unknown soldier sent to this country for interment at Arlington National Cemetery, Father Duff accompanied the body on board the U. S. S. Olympia.

He served in the navy yards at Philadelphia and Brooklyn, at Lakehurst, N. J., and Parris Island, S. C. He became chief of Navy chaplains last July—the first Catholic priest in American history to attain that honor.

Luciano, 5 Aids Enter Sing Sing

New York, June 18 (A).—New York City's Public Enemy No. 1, no longer called "Lucky," was sent up the river tonight to serve from 30 to 50 years in Sing Sing prison.

With him went five men convicted of being his associates in a $12,000,000-a-year vice racket, all under sentences ranging from a minimum of 7½ to a maximum of 40 years.

Four less important members of Charles Luciano's gang, who pleaded guilty, received lighter sentences and will be committed to some other prison, to be decided on later. Three of them had turned State's evidence.

Extraordinary police precautions marked the transfer of Luciano and his five followers from a downtown courthouse to the sprawling prison a little more than an hour's ride up the Hudson.

In pronouncing sentence, Supreme Court Justice Philip J. McCook warned that any attempts to wreak vengeance on the witnesses who helped convict the men would bring swift retribution from the State.

Ely Denies Intent To Head 3d Party

Westfield, Mass., June 18 (U.P.).—Former Democratic Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, New Deal critic, told the United Press tonight "there is absolutely nothing" to rumors he might be the man who, Father Charles E. Coughlin said, would announce himself within 24 hours as a third party Presidential candidate.

"I know nothing about it," Ely said, "and I can't think of anybody in this part of the country who would be the man."

Father Coughlin had said the third party candidate would make his announcement tonight or tomorrow from "Washington, Boston or New York."

Ely, who revealed in an exclusive interview with the United Press last week he would "take a walk" from the Democratic Party if its 1938 platform hinted revival of New Deal policies already declared unconstitutional, reiterated he had "not given third party talk any consideration."

Bar Group Expels 4 Chicago Judges

Chicago, June 18 (A).—The Chicago Bar Association today expelled four judges on the finding of its board of managers that they engaged too actively in Illinois primary politics.

The four were Circuit Judge Harry M. Fisher, Superior Judge James J. Kelly, Appellate Judge John J. Sullivan, all Democrats, and Superior Judge Oscar F. Nelson, Republican.

The report found them guilty of "flagrant violation" of Canon 28 of the American Bar Association, which says a judge "should not engage generally in partisan activities" and should avoid any suspicion of "being warped by political bias."

The four were among 41 judges who resigned from the association after it launched its recent investigation of judges in politics.

The report asked that notice of censure be sent seven other judges, listing Joseph H. McGarry, Roman E. Posanski, Francis Borrelli, Joseph Burke, James F. Fardy, Cornelius J. Harrington and Frank M. Padden.

Reopening 'Row' Ends As Senators Give In

By the Associated Press.

Congress stopped long enough in its rush for adjournment yesterday to agree that next winter's session really shouldn't open on Sunday.

But the rub came when the Senate and House had difficulty in deciding when the Seventy-Fifth session should convene. Under the Norris "lame duck" law, the opening andatorily is set as January 3. In 137, however, this date happens to be Sunday.

Spotting this, the Senate passed a resolution advancing the opening to Monday, January 4. The House quickly agreed against Sunday, but added an amendment making it Tuesday, January 5.

At dusk, however weary Senators gave in and fixed the date as January 5.

Senator Johnson Due Back at Office Soon

Senator Hiram W. Johnson, veteran California Republican, may be able to return to his duties by Saturday, his office announced yesterday.

It was reported Senator Johnson was rapidly recovering from an intestinal disorder which has kept him abed for more than a week and that he was able to sit up for a while yesterday.

Nunnally Company Fined in Labor Case

The Nunnally Co. was fined $20 yesterday on one count and received suspended sentences in two other cases, when William I. Hodge, manager, appeared in Police Court to answer the charges of violating the female eight-hour labor law.

Judge John P. McMahon imposed the fine when he found the firm guilty of working employes more than six days a week. The suspended sentences were given on charges of failure to keep an accurate time record, and failure to keep printed record of time off.

The charges were preferred by Inspetcors M. Louise Simpson and J. W. Millspaugh, of the Health Department. Alice Allen and Frances Boxwell were the employes named in the informations.

Mrs. Bovello Rites To Be Tomorrow

Mrs. Corcetta Bovello, widow of Angelo Bovello, died Wednesday at her residence, 14 New York avenue northeast, after a lingering illness.

She was born in Cenfalu, Italy, in 1856, and for the past 38 years had made her home in Washington.

Surviving her are six sons, Joseph R., Nunnio A., Samuel, Clarke, Anthony and Vincent Bovello, and one daughter, Mrs. Pauline Bottone.

Funeral services will be held at her residence tomorrow at 9:30 a. m., followed by requiem mass at St. Aloysius Church. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

"Today Religion Is Free."

The State of Maryland instructs its county school officials "to prepare for use in public schools of the State a program providing for the salute of The Flag and other patriotic exercises from time to time." None will object to the spirit behind this order. But if its execution closes the classrooms to a child because his religious scruples forbid a salute to The Flag, the wisdom of the application is questionable.

Just such a condition has developed in the grammar school of nearby Oxon Hill. Three children of parents who have been lifelong members of the sect known as Jehovah's Witnesses have been informed they will not be admitted to school next year. When the children first were discovered not saluting, in accordance with their religious training, it was hoped that the local school authorities would meet the situation by merely excusing the trio from the exercises. But patriotic societies of the neighborhood prevented that. They demanded that the children be punished for obeying the curious doctrinal injunction which classifies The Flag as a "graven image." The strange assumption is that there is some value in a compulsory and regimented act of obeisance.

As a result, the father of the children—a man with an honorable war record—is planning an appeal to the State board of education. Presumably, he will urge that a special dispensation be allowed his children.

To support this proposal, he might submit that patriotism is poorly measured by outward gestures, illustrating his point by the example of the many thousand German hands that are raised daily in compulsory Nazi salutes. And he might remind the board of Maryland's long-established tradition of tolerance, concluding his argument with an apt quotation from President Roosevelt's recent speech in Vincennes: "Today religion is still free within our borders; it must ever remain so."

No Misnomer.

The cameras of Hollywood have been so long trained on the Never-Never Land of wedding-cake illusion that its producers are loath to visualize the public as ready and eager for realism. This observation is borne out by a picture called "Fury," showing to capacity audiences at a local playhouse this week. Not made with a view to box-office, the public has been quicker to appreciate the underlying values than were the promoters.

The story finds its drama, as did "The Informer," in the struggle between a man and his conscience. But with unsparing skill, the director, Fritz Lang, has also shown how a mob gradually gains the impetus for lynching; how county and State officials, by their passivity, are partners to the crime; and how a community readily protects its members who have taken the law into their own hands. The picture is an intelligent, if somewhat melodramatic, effort to show Judge Lynch without benefit of glamour or soft gauze over the lens.

"A mob can't think; it doesn't have time," pleads one of the characters in "Fury." The woeful truth of this observation and its utter inadequacy as an apology for mob violence are well pointed by the film. In this day of murderous tar-and-feather parties in Florida, the Black Legion in Michigan and reported floggings for a woman and minister who dared show sympathy for striking tenant farmers in Arkansas, the moral takes on an almost ghastly timeliness.

ADA Can Continue.

The House has seen the error of its legislation in respect to the District Alley Dwelling Authority and, by adopting a Senate amendment in the deficiency bill, has done its part to keep this important work going. The amendment authorizes the ADA to use unexpended appropriations and any other revenue that may accrue. Without this authorization, the authority would have been prevented from using even its cash on hand after June 30. The House, in seeking to withhold a requested $300,000 appropriation, overlooked the fact that the alley dwelling act as drafted requires an annual appropriation to keep it in effect.

As it is, the ADA will continue to function, though in an even more modest fashion than originally contemplated. It was first planned to set up a revolving fund of $3,000,000 as a starter on the $15,000,000 job of cleaning up Washington's alley slums. But the initial appropriation, passed in 1934, allowed only $500,000. To this a $200,000 WPA grant was subsequently added. It was this extra sum that persuaded Congress this year to forego a second appropriation.

The net result is that the ADA will have to worry through on a little over $200,000 this year—most of it the remainder of its original $700,000. Half a million dollars has been spent to convert disease-ridden shacks and tenements into low-cost housing projects, garages, parking lots, playgrounds and the like. So quietly has this work proceeded that probably few Washingtonians appreciate what has been accomplished on an expenditure modest beside that laid out on more glittering and wasteful projects.

About-Face On Sanctions.

It was Great Britain, more than any other nation, which last year rallied the membership of the League behind a strict interpretation of its Covenant, and in so doing made possible the application of financial and economic sanctions against Italy. Yet it is that same nation which is now the first of any of the great League members to propose that sanctions be abandoned.

This is an about-face, the importance of which can hardly be exaggerated. To Great Britain's credit it must be said that no easier but less honorable method of doing what is now proposed was chosen. London could have permitted some small nation to act as the bellwether of the movement to abolish sanctions. It could have permitted the sanctions program to disappear through gradual non-enforcement. It did neither. That took courage.

It also took courage for Anthony Eden, the British Foreign Secretary, who more than any other statesman has been identified with the sanctionist cause, to appear before the House of Commons and announce the cabinet's decision, taken on his advice. In that body, as the hostile demonstration he received from the Labor and Liberal benches shows, pro-League sentiment is still very strong. Nor was he received with much enthusiasm on his own side of the House. No administration likes to admit the failure of its foreign policy, which is precisely what Mr. Eden did on behalf of Mr. Baldwin's government.

But this readiness to take the bull by the horns, to recognize unpleasant facts for what they are, while admirable in itself, will not change the fact that no small section of British opinion will feel that the cause of peace has been betrayed by their statesmen.

Yet it is obvious that as long as the obligation existed to carry out the sanctions program, Great Britain did so loyally and wholeheartedly and is doing so today. There are good reasons to believe that under slightly more favorable circumstances sanctions would have accomplished with regard to the Italo-Ethiopian dispute what they set out to achieve. They failed to no small extent because they were not universally applied. There were important and powerful nations, among them the United States, whose non-cooperative attitude of itself robbed the sanctions program of the universality necessary to insure success.

Today all this is scant comfort for those who believe in the collective system, who regard it, for all the difficulty of application, as the only real barrier to another world catastrophe. In wiping out sanctions, as the League will now certainly do, Geneva will eliminate itself as an agency capable of enforcing peace. With the experience of the first application of sanctions in mind, League nations will long hesitate before taking that course again, whatever the provocation. To all intents and purposes Articles XV and XVI of the Covenant have ceased to exist.

What this means is plain. Any nation intent on aggression need no longer fear the force of collective restraint, and will therefore be encouraged to start aggression whenever it feels the moment ripe. The League failure means that might is still more powerful than right; that world public opinion is impotent because unsupported by any physical force; that the law of the jungle is still the law of nations.

The prospect is not one which those who yearn for a peaceful and orderly world can view with anything but dread. Nor are the dangers, for this country, to be exorcized by fervid denials that they affect our welfare.

Railway Co-operation.

Co-ordinator Eastman is no doubt right in asserting that volume is the solution of railway passenger service troubles, since "terminals, trains and lines are now used only to a fraction of their capacity." To secure an increased volume of passenger traffic he suggests various methods of recapturing business lost to motor carriers. Among these are lower fares, lighter and speedier trains, and supplementary use of buses and cabs.

The railroads have been exceedingly slow to perceive and slower to introduce many changes that would strengthen their competitive position. But it has to be remembered that they have been severely handicapped by the long delay in bringing competing transport agencies under Federal regulatory laws. Furthermore, the losses resulting from prolonged business depression have been accentuated by the restrictions imposed upon the roads through the labor clauses of the transportation act of 1933. Their past experience creates a not unnatural fear that any gains secured by improving the quality of their services may be lost to them through regulatory restrictions or unreasonable labor exactions.

Given assurance that efforts to increase earnings will meet with co-operation of the Government and the railway unions, managerial enterprise will be stimulated and investment confidence will revive, making it easier to obtain new capital to finance expansion programs.

Canada Points The Moral.

Canada's Supreme Court has played havoc with the "New Deal" legislation passed by the recent Conservative government in that country. The unemployment insurance act and the Dominion marketing act applicable to farm products have been declared unconstitutional, while the court has split, 3 to 3, on the question of the validity of laws fixing minimum wages and maximum hours and providing for one day's rest in seven. Another important act providing for a commission similar to our Federal Trade Commission, empowered to regulate fair trade practices, was upheld only in part, some sections being declared unconstitutional.

As was the case here, when various Administration measures were overruled by the court of last resort, the Canadian Supreme Court could not concern itself with the economic or social desirability of the laws whose constitutionality is challenged. In both countries, the courts are simply called upon to test the validity of laws in the light of specified constitutional limitations. Our Supreme Court, for example, stated emphatically in the Schechter case that it is "not the province of the court to consider the economic advantages or disadvantages of such a centralized system" (i. e. the NRA). "It is sufficient," the opinion read, "to say that the Federal Constitution does not provide for it."

Under the Canadian constitution, all powers not vested in the provinces belong to the central Dominion government, reversing our system which vests in the States all powers not specifically delegated to the Federal Government. Considering the greater emphasis which the Canadians place upon centralization, laws furthering a concentration of power at the national capital appeared to have a better chance to survive there than here. The fact that they have also encountered serious constitutional obstacles emphasizes the paramount importance of the constitutional issue in both countries.

Americans and Canadians have two related questions to answer: First, they must decide whether they want to put back on the statute books legislation which the courts have invalidated. If so, they must decide whether such laws justify a change in the constitutional framework of government.

In Canada the issue is not confused by any sharp political cleavage such as exists in this country. The invalidated Canadian laws, and the measures whose fate still hangs in the balance, were passed by a Conservative government. The successor Liberal government apparently has no wish to see this legislation nullified. On the contrary, it is preparing to urge a revision of the constitution in case the privy council in London concurs with the decisions of the supreme court. Thus the problem will be confronted without the confusion of political implications.

Unfortunately, Americans have been inclined either to dodge or to take a partisan stand on the constitutional issue that confronts this country. Some upholders of invalidated New Deal laws blame the Supreme Court because it did not interpret the Constitution in accordance with their own emotional reactions. Others cling blindly or obstinately to proposals that are plainly unconstitutional, while declaring that the Constitution does not need amendment.

Perhaps the Canadian reaction will show Americans the folly and futility of refusing to face the fact that a federal form of government is from its very nature one of divided powers. If the people are not satisfied with existing conditions, the remedy is at hand. It is for them to decide whether they prefer to adopt the laws to the Constitution, or to modify the provisions of the organic law which restrict extension of centralized authority.

When politics is concerned, always bear this in mind: The hog that squeals the loudest is the one farthest from the trough.

Treasure Trove.

P. J. R. MacIntosh in The Texas Weekly.

There is a man down in the Rio Grande Valley not far from Bracketville who has spent much time looking for 14 mule loads of treasure which, he has indisputed proofs, was left by Gen. Santa Anna after the battle of San Jacinto. Just how Santa Anna got to anywhere near Bracketville after the battle (or before it) history does not state. At one time this man had definitely located the right spot and was just on the point of unearthing the treasure but a mysterious party of Mexicans came along the night before and took it all away. Life is like that.

Another story has to do with 27 cartloads (more or less) of gold and silver brought from Mexico during the Civil War and buried somewhere. Dissension arose among the members of the party and, in the course of the fighting which ensued, all were killed with the exception of one man who was taken to a hospital in San Antonio where he died. But he left the inevitable "waybill" showing where the treasure was hidden. The location was supposed to be at the foot of a hill, but when the searchers reached the place it was found (in the words of one of the party) that "somebody had moved the hill." Thus another beautiful dream had gone aglimmering.

The General Welfare Clause.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "E. T." objects to President Roosevelt's statement that the Supreme Court decision nullifying the New York State minimum-wage law created a "no man's land" in which neither Federal nor State Government can exercise authority to protect children or anybody else from exploitation.

It is his contention that this twilight zone was not created by the nine men in black but already existed under the terms of the Constitution. The claim is, in my judgment, a highly untenable one. There is excellent evidence that the authors of the country's basic law intended to vest Congress with all needed authority to legislate for "the general welfare." The records of the period and the present opinions of lawyers whose opinions are not swayed by fat salaries from still fatter corporations agree quite closely on this point. And if "the general welfare" does not involve making laws to forbid starvation wages, unreasonably long hours of labor and unsanitary working environs, then at least two words in our language should be redefined.

The necessity for an amendment to the Constitution to establish beyond disputation or denial the right of Congress to enact statutes to save working people and minors from the ruthlessness of modern Simon Legrees does not arise because the founding fathers failed to grant this authority. They did grant it. The general welfare clause covers the whole domain of social welfare legislation. But in view of the arrogation by the Supreme Court to itself of power never given it in the Nation's fundamental document, an amendment becomes imperative. Without it the mildest measures tending toward economic security will be tossed into outer darkness by the supreme guardians of the rich. More adequate laws will, of course, receive even rougher treatment. Unless the Constitution is so amended, the American people may as well abandon, once and for all, any hope of legal restraint of organized greed and black reaction.

"E. T." manifests profound respect for the Supreme Court because it held that "the right to fix wages is a liberty which neither Government (State or national) may violate." The "right to fix wages"—another way of stating the much-vaunted "sacred right of contract"—when exercised by sweatship owners over needy and helpless employes is on a par with the "negotiations" carried on by a robber with a revolver and the man whose purse he is stealing.

Reactions To Blanton Questionnaire

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The latest act of Congressman Tom Blanton is not a matter to be lightly disregarded. It strikes at the very foundation of the principles of the Constitution he so zealously (sic) attempts to guard. Not alone is the questionnaire he sent to the teachers a violation of the right of privacy, but it is also a violation of the spirit of the unlawful search and seizure clause of the Constitution—it being a search into the privacy of the teacher's mind without due process of law. If this fanatical act is allowed to go unchallenged, it will not be long before some other half-insane Congressman will develop a phobia against Utopianism, red underwear or housemaid's knee and will send questionnaires to teachers asking their private opinion about it upon pain of dismissal.

It is immaterial what the teacher thinks privately so long as he or she does not teach forbidden subjects. This is all any government has the right to demand. His or her private thoughts or opinions are no more the business of a Congressman than are the nocturnal ramblings of my aunt's black cat. But Tom Blanton is not alone to be criticized. The entire committee of which he is a member should bear a portion of the burden. If the people of the District of Columbia had any capacity for righteous indignation over the violation of the constitutional rights of the teachers of their children, they would form an Anti-Bigotry League.

However (perish the thought), if they feel no burning anger; if they do not see that tomorrow they themselves may be the victims of some tyrannical inquisition; if they agree that teachers should not have private thoughts with which Congressmen disagree; if they see in Blanton's actions no evidence of a barbarous intolerance wholly repugnant to the American dream of freedom and liberty—they should sit back and decorously rot in peace.

If they believe there is no cause for alarm, they will undoubtedly get the form of government of which they impliedly approve—some form of despotism headed by a modern Nero, who will feed them to the lions if they disagree. But if they do nothing to put a quietus on Blantonism, that is their proper destiny. EUGENE B. FORCE.
Washington, June 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I submit a list of questions that might be addressed to Representative Blanton by the Board of Education:

1. Do you believe in the right of free speech?
2. Do you believe that children in school have intellects which should be stimulated by knowledge or that they should be forbidden to learn anything you do not know?
3. Do you believe in the Declaration of Independence?
4. Why should teachers who dare to think for themselves be excluded from the school room?
5. What punishment do you consider severe enough to fit the crime of the open mind?
6. Was the Spanish Inquisition a failure because some of the Huguenots escaped?
7. Do you believe in the abstract right of political revolution?
8. Should Washington, Jefferson and Franklin have been hanged for fomenting revolution?
9. What books of George S. Counts or Charles A. Beard have you read?
10. List these in the order of their degree of menace to American institutions?
11. Name the specific crime against America committed by W. W. Charters.
12. Do you believe a Texas politician necessarily competent to dictate the policies of the school system in our National Capital?
13. Have you read "Alice in Wonderland?"
14. Do you believe in Santa Claus?
15. Are you a Communist, secretly plotting to promote their program by giving them free and unlimited advertising?
16. Should everyone be imprisoned, or banished from the country, who disagrees with you in religion, politics, or economic theory?
17. How much do you estimate it would cost the American taxpayer to crush out all the people who believe in the Bill of Rights? Please state in billions—avoid fractions.
18. Should all Russian teachers be executed who dare tell their children that there is such a country as the United States?
19. How many million Russians do you know personally?
20. Was "Little Red Riding Hood" designed to spread communistic propaganda by means of sex appeal?
21. Should red traffic lights and danger signals be abolished?
22. Have you introduced your bill to eliminate the red stripes from the American flag?
24. What is your favorite bedtime story? L. R. O.

Liberty Of 'Industrialists.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since some slight efforts have been made to alleviate the hardships of the working class and to increase the share it receives of the wealth it produces, loud yelps have resounded to heaven begging the American public to "save the Constitution," to "uphold the American system" and to "defend our liberties." These patriotic theme songs emanate, of course, from the millionaire industrialists, and their camp followers in Congress and in court.

Not long ago they valiantly protected America against the evils of cheap electricity by pouring millions into the fight against the holding company bill (flooding Congress with fake telegrams from widows and orphans) and by multiplying injunctions against public operation. With the courage of their piratical forbears in the realms of high finance, they nullify social legislation and block the passage of the child labor amendment. In the meantime child labor increases steadily. Appropriations for education drop generally, so that the industrialist can escape heavy taxes. The courts, in the name of liberty, declare unconstitutional Federal and State laws to protect women and children in industry, as well as Federal laws to establish fair labor practices. Strikers are murdered in a number of States. A distinguished minister representing the Federal Council, Churches of Christ in America, says that peonage exists in many Southern States. Arkansas treats the world to the spectacle of flogging a Presbyterian minister and a young woman, because they sympathize with striking share-croppers.

The kind of liberty which the industrialists want to protect is a liberty resulting in periodic depressions, ever-increasing unemployment, and a lowering standard of living for the masses. The patriotic piffle which they spread by the use of their vast resources is designed to blind Americans to the evils inherent in any system of industrial anarchy.

Our Constitution must be regarded as a means to an end if America is to be a real democracy. It is not by any form of political belief to be taken as an end in itself. A static society will not survive.

JOHN MURRAY.
Washington, June 17.

For Open Sports.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer makes the plea that our local athletic leaders try to make possible the best development of white and colored athletes in this city by opening up athletic competition. We are aware of the international opposition to any restriction by Germany on Jewish athletes. The Olympic oath and spirit are opposed to racial discrimination. In fact, the games were planned to improve international relationships.

Why cannot some strong members of our social leadership foster city-wide amateur tournaments for all contestants? We will never get the best athletes representing our city otherwise. The American people have gone very far in racial tolerance. Individual social acceptance is not involved in athletic competition. Our athletic winners must engage victors from other cities finally regardless of race, and they do it in a broader, finer spirit than some of us realize. The American people are much more democratic in sports than formerly. Athletics in Washington would come in for far more interest by the injection of a little color.

Washington has just been humiliated in the sports world by denial of colored amateur athletes of this section to compete in local Olympic tryouts, and by having these athletes certified by Commissioner Bingham to the finals in Cambridge, Mass., without trial.

A champion Washington athlete or team can never be truly representative of Washington until all of Washington's competing athletes have had a fair chance to win or lose. E. B. HENDERSON.
Falls Church, Va., June 17.

The Wind Blows Free

SOME years ago when prohibition was at its height (if "height" is the proper word), a man with considerable political backing (he had been a doorkeeper in the House of Representatives in Washington) conceived the idea of turning one of the huge ships anchored in the Patuxent River into a hotel, restaurant and dance hall.

He couldn't make up his mind at once which of the three to pick: the "Mount Vernon," which had once housed the Kaiser; the "Monticello," which had been hit by a submarine while carrying troops to France, or the "George Washington," which had carried President Wilson on a notable mission. (The "America" had not at that time joined the party on the Patuxent.) And his indecision, as it turned out, was of no real importance, for although the matter was seriously discussed with a member of the Shipping Board, nothing came of it.

While it is generally admitted that the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment has dimmed the luster of the scheme, the subject has never been entirely shelved by the rheumatic salts of Solomon's Island.

Capt. Ebenezer Longbow is the idea's most earnest and persistent advocate. Capt. Eb is the island's champion whittler. Sometimes he whittles whistles and sometimes he whittles ships, but most of he time he just whittles. Cook Webster, storekeeper and statesman, says if he whittled for his victuals he'd live high.

"What do you reckon them ships cost the Government?" demands Capt. Eb, and answers immediately. "My guess is between 25 and 50 thousand a year. There are 48 men aboard and that runs into money. There ought to be 10 times that number, cooks, stewards, waiters, entertainers, and they all ought to be making money for the Government.

"Betcha those ships would fill so fast the overflow would provide boarders for every house in Solomons. And we'd string along the shore and watch supplies go aboard by overhead cable. Sure: Ain't those ships practically tied to a cornfield? Everything would go straight to the table from the field and the store in baskets by overhead cable. And the guests will catch their own fish and be credited with what they supply. And oysters! Say, did you fellows ever realize that there are hundreds of bushels of oysters on the hulls of those ships—maybe thousands of bushels? All he cooks' assistants will have to do will be to scrape 'em off.

"Dr. Truitt at the laboratory was telling me something about oysters. Of course, I could tell Dr. Truitt a whole lot about oysters he never dreamed of, but he has a lot of scientific stuff that is right interesting. He says they inhale gallons of water for the sake of microscopic plants and animals they contain and after giving said microscopic plants and animals a screen test they pass 'em to their stomachs to do character bits in the current production and then exhale the gallons of water that previously contained 'em. Them's his exact words.

And I asked the doctor what would happen if all the oysters inhaled and exhaled at the one time and he said if they were attached to a movable object it would to all intents and purposes become a moving object, meaning it would go for'ard a bit. And I bet that's just what happend on the twenty-seventh of October, 1934.

On that date at 4 o'clock in the afternoon Lieut. Comdr. Bailey was having afternoon tea with the bosun and the bosun's mate, which was a habit he picked up in English waters when he was helping the captain of his ship to dodge submarines. It was a ca'm afternoon, not a breeze stirring, and all of a sudden they all spilled their tea on their vests. You see the ship had plunged for'ard, yawed, and then busted for'ard again. They pondered over that for a long time but never did get the right of it.

My idea is that all the oysters on the bottom of the boat just happened to inhale and exhale at exactly the same moment. I bet that isn't likely to happen again in a thousand years. Onless, of course, the oysters happen to be susceptible to music. I've been thinking of that, too. Just suppose the orchestra is playing dance music and all the feet of the dancers make a regular rhythm on the deck, ain't it reasonable to suppose that the rhythm will be communicated through the timbers and make the oysters inhale and exhale in unison? If it did they'd have to put extra hawsers on the ship in dance hours.

"No, sir, it ain't any more unreasonable than a scheme I read about when I was a boy. The inventor had a large tube running through the hull of a vessel from bow to stern and so when you once got the ship started the water running through the tube turned the rear wheel which sent the ship forward, which cause the water to rush through the tube faster, which made the wheel turn faster, which—well, you see how it works: the quicker she went the faster she'd go. That's logical, isn't it?

"But what's that got to do with the hotel business? Nothing. Well, anyhow, I'm going to get Cook Webster to use his influence. If we get a hotel and restaurant and cabaret on any one of them ships, I want to get me a job as master of ceremonies."

Changed Atmosphere.

The conduct of the Department of Justice has been very phony in the Louisiana income tax prosecutions involving Seymour Weiss, who was Huey Long's collector, and certain other members of Huey's gang. While Huey lived and devoted himself to needling President Roosevelt in the Senate and on the air the department was always going to lay him over a barrel some day and give him his needlings under the income tax law. Now that Huey is dead, however, and his gang has made peace with President Roosevelt's own gang in New Orleans, the outstanding indictments have been dropped with the simple explanation that there is "a changed atmosphere" in New Orleans.

The great weakness of the ordinary citizens of New Orleans in their fight against Huey was that the politicians of the opposition, which is to say Roosevelt's crowd, were just as crooked as Huey's grafters and not as smart. The Roosevelt gang included gamblers and other underworld types no different from the majority of Huey's gang. Weiss is neither a professional gambler nor an underworld character, but a tough, stand-up gang politician who often supplied the courage for Huey in difficult moments. He sat before a Senate committee and refused to say how much money he had collected for political purposes or who gave it to him or what he had done with it, and insisted that he kept no books.

Weiss said that whenever they needed some money they went out and got it from people who "believed" in their sacred cause and spent it according to their own judgment. He also offered to take Gen. Ansell outside the hearing room and pop him on the nose when the general undertook to peel him with questions regarding matters which he considered to be personal and outside the scope of the inquiry.

• • • •

Since Huey's death Weiss has claimed to be out of politics, but that can hardly be true. He is the type of man Jim Farley would be pleased to do business with and is a better political operator than anyone in Mr. Roosevelt's own New Orleans gang, as he often demonstrated when Huey was giving the Administration crowd hell.

As a tax the income tax is all right, but as a punitive and coercive weapon it is a dangerous law, and the New Orleans cases prove that. The Administration could have been strictly on the level in starting the prosecution, but the political situation was such that their motives came under suspicion. It looked very much as though Mr. Roosevelt passed the word to the Department of Justice to go after Huey for political reasons, and, now that the indictments have been dropped owing to a change of atmosphere, there is nothing else to believe but that. And let there be no foolishness about Mr. Roosevelt's having nothing to do with such matters. Mr. Roosevelt is the politician of his Administration, and Mr. Farley is just a little boy by comparison.

So here we have the Department of Justice going after a political opponent of the Administration with a threat of prison and easing up when the political opposition is removed.

I have been insisting that the so-called G-men and the theatrical ballyhoo of the prison department about the mysterious Island of Alcatraz serve to distract attention from some other activities of the Department of Justice in which the department's record is not so good. The G-men are all right as policemen and Alcatraz is a tight prison, but if the Department of Justice itself cannot be trusted to keep out of politics both the G's and the island can be used to flog people for speaking out of turn. A good deal of what Huey said about Roosevelt was true.

It was a good thing to kill off or put away kidnapers and bank robbers whose names stand on the score of the G-men, but these exploits of the Government fly-cops have obscured some bad failures in the field of white collar crime. Not one of the great master swindlers who robbed the people of millions and drove little people to suicide and reduced thousands of industrious, hard working common citizens to destitute poverty has ever been sent to prison. These people did much more damage than the handful of stick-up men and abductors who were put out of action with such clamorous publicity. Aside from the people they drove to suicide, they ruined the lives of thousands of Americans who will never be able to get started again. But the worst of them are out and around to this day, playing golf in the suburbs, yachting on the Sound and living on money which they stole from people who were saving for their old age.

And I still insist the 11 years, the sentence imposed on Al Capone for income tax evasion, is too much for that offense. Of course that isn't what he is being punished for, but that was the charge in the indictment, and if you start waving an 11-year sentence at a political opponent you may choke off a man who has something important to say.

If you can't trust the Department of Justice in the Huey Long case the same skepticism runs against all its operations. The department has plenty of expensive press agents living the life of Reilly as the guests of the taxpayers. This would be a good time for them to get hot and explain just how a change of atmosphere in New Orleans has justified now something which had the appearance of criminal misconduct when Huey was kicking the Administration's New Orleans gang in the pants.

Dynamite Kills Child.

Burgettstown, Pa., June 18 (AP).—An explosion demolished a miner's home today, killing 12-year-old Thomas Huggins and critically injuring his mother and two other children. Investigators said the boy apparently accidentally set off 10 sticks of dynamite which they asserted his father, Francis Huggins, kept in the cellar.

The League's Weakness

Geneva Observer Sees Unwillingness of Members to Live Up to Covenant as Origin of Cry for Revision in Geneva.

By Bertram Pickard.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

ON EVERY hand we hear that the League must be reformed and the Covenant revised. The reformers fall broadly into three distinct groups:

(1) There are those who say, "clearly you can do nothing with half a League; the thing to do is to be realistic. Italy must be kept in the fold; Germany and Japan must be brought back; last, but not least, the United States must be induced to come in, if necessary by the elimination from the Covenant of all the mutual assistance provisions (Articles 10 and 16)."

(2) There are those, on the other hand, who scout the idea of a "talking-shop" League, based on a toothless Kellogg pact. "It is obvious," they protest, "that unless we are realistic and give precision to the sanctions clauses of the Covenant, so that would-be aggressors will be forewarned, there can be no peace."

(3) Finally there are those (e. g. Fascist Italy) who, still in the name of realism, loudly decry the absurdity of a League of states—big, middling and small—all placed on an approximately equal legal footing, with substantially similar rights of representation. "What is needed," they say, "is an inner hierarchy of great states whose power and major responsibilities entitle them jointly to determine the course of dynamic history."

Universalists Appear To Have Strong Point.

AT FIRST sight the universalists have a strong case. A truncated League is handicapped at every turn. But where is the evidence for assuming that the mere presence at the council table of the representatives of all states will necessarily lead to constructive action?

Is it certain that United States membership in the League would have resulted, necessarily, in effective joint action being taken in the Sino-Japanese conflict? It is doubtful. The Disarmament Conference included delegations from all the great powers. Yet, three years of consultation resulted in a deadlock. The World Economic Conference of 1933 was an unrestricted conference—and as unlimited a failure.

Universality is fine if you can get it. But of itself it does not unlock the gates to peace, apparently.

The second group of realists show a passionate, and sometimes pathetic, faith in precise engagements—or rather certain kinds of engagements. The French group of states have always ridiculed the idea that Kellogg pact signatures give security to anyone. Without provision for enforcement, law is no law, to the Latin mind. And even with such provisions these can never be clearly enough defined.

The obligations of mutual assistance in the Covenant (Articles 10 and 16) were all very well in their way, but, even when it was expected the United States would be in the League, France did not feel safe in face of a disarmed Germany without a separate Anglo-American guarantee of her territory. When that collapsed, pactomania so obsessed her that Locarno, plus her eastern alliances, still gave her so little sense of security that she urged new regional mutual assistance pacts, concluded the Franco-Soviet pact, at risk to Locarno, and finally came to such an agreement with Italy (the country, be it noted, that had quitted the Triple Alliance for the Triple Entente during the war) that she felt obliged to sabotage those very obligations of the Covenant (Articles 10 and 16) which for years French policy had striven to reinforce!

It may fairly be deduced that there is something more fundamental than the scraps of paper of varying quality upon which treaty obligations are inscribed.

Big-Power Directorate Has Two Main Criticisms.

THE THIRD group of super-realists, who decry "equality before the law," and believe that the affairs of Europe, if not of the world, should be run by a self-appointed directorate of big powers, appears to overlook two important factors.

In the first place, the hoary doctrine that might is right is challenged today as it never was before, both by public opinion in general and by the small states of the world in particular.

In the second place, the Mussolinian concept of a great power's directorate is surely a somewhat naive prospect. Admittedly, the policy of mutual accommodation as between big powers can go far. But the whole trouble with the League, and international affairs generally, is neither more nor less than the rivalries and conflicting policies of these self-same big powers.

Even the foregoing very cursory examination of the main demands for League reform reveals how neatly the opposing currents of opinion cancel one another out. Opinion in favor of weakening existing obligations is approximately balanced by opinion in favor of strengthening them; while the big power directorate school is more than offset by those who consider such a conception outdated and discredited.

And, if, after all, there should be a substantial majority for one or other of these tendencies, even so the minority could, and probably would, block revision of the Covenant till crack of doom. It requires unanimity of all the members to validate an amendment of the Covenant.

Will To Peace Seen Essential To League.

WHAT CONCLUSION is to be drawn? That the League and its Covenant are already fossils in time's deposits and that international political life must break through into some new form, or perish in chaos and conflict? Not necessarily at all. The League Covenant is an extraordinarily flexible document. Whilst the mechanism of the League is capable of almost indefinite extension, or adaptation to new conditions, provided there be the will to work it.

Everything hangs on that: the will to act, and the ability to know when and how to act.

What are the essentials of any properly balanced peace-keeping system? They are extremely simple in broad outline:

(1) There must be common respect for the existing status quo, always provided there are the means for changing it when new conditions necessitate change.

(2) There must be mutual assistance in the face of unprovoked violence, always provided that national armaments have been so far reduced by agreement, as to render defiance of the community of states by a single state an almost unthinkable act of folly.

(3) Last, but not least, there must be a technique of war-prevention, ensuring that conflicts are tackled in the incipient stage, and not when they have issued in organized warfare; furthermore, disputes likely to lead to conflict should be submitted to one form or another of third-party judgment, if and when conciliation fails.

But all these elements are provided for in the Covenant.

The famous Article 10 enjoins mutual respect for the integrity and independence of the members. Moreover, the further obligation to "preserve as against external aggression" would not be the impracticable engagement it now is, assuming the provision of Article 19 (peaceful change) were taken as seriously as President Wilson and Gen. Smuts intended they should be taken.

The obligations of Article 16 (sanctions), which today are so fiercely debated, would be infinitely less onerous if Article 8 had been applied and general disarmament carried out; instead of which a new arms race has rendered common action progressively more dangerous.

Finally, if there had been the same will to utilize the flexible provisions of Article 11 (prevention of war) to nip in the bud major conflicts, in the same way that minor ones have been extinguished, the League need not have sat helplessly by while first Japan and then Italy completed large scale preparations for "aggression."

Difficulty Lies With Leaguers, Not League.

THE TROUBLE, in short, is not with the Covenant, but with the Covenanters; not with the League, but with the Leaguers.

No doubt the text of the law could be improved in places, just as the procedure of the League could be made more effective in certain respects. The Covenant and Kellogg pact ought to be harmonized, and the Covenant separated, perhaps, if some appropriate legal device can be found, from the Treaty of Versailles.

But unless states (notably the great powers) are willing to pay a big price for peace by being willing to give up special privilege and advantage, by accepting a third party's view of justice on questions leading to conflict, by transferring power progressively from the litigants (i. e. sovereign states) to the law (i. e. the community of states), no new pacts and treaties will be of much avail.

Honorary Degrees For 1936.

Stoofie, Hemingway X.—You stand apart from the rank and file as one of the truly unusual and outstanding men of the year. You attended the formal receptions on both the Normandie and the Queen Mary and left with only one fork and a couple of spoons, at no time carving your initials on the balustrade, prying a panel off the dining room wall or making off with a mural. Take your choice of degrees, Mr. Stoofie; the pleasure is all ours.

II.

Naglewharf, Chester R.—One degree is hardly enough for you; you are entitled to a pair. During the last 12 months you were present at 11 movie first nights with the usual Broadway fanfare. You were within arm's length of a dozen picture stars, but did not ask for an autograph, and to a query, "Wouldn't you like my autograph?" from one of the nation's most famous Hollywood ladies, you inquired, "What for?" and left the lobby.

III.

Ginginello, Luigi—Mr. Ginginello, you are a great American. You won $50,000 in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes, refused to pose for the newsreel men and limited yourself to a carefully worded statement in which you said you had no idea what you would do with the money, except that you would not send your boy to college. Your distinction in American life is made greater by the fact that you signed your own name, not adopting the nom de plume of "Come to Papa," "We Need It" or "Last Chance."

IV.

Queppingale, Dudley W.—You attended a great political convention, remained sober throughout, and refrained both in the auditorium and hotel lobbies from doing a tap dance, reciting "Boots" or trying to discuss economics as if you knew something about them. Reach into that basket of honorary degrees and help yourself.

V.

Bellopman, Aloysius M.—We give you not only a set of our finest degrees, but a box of neckties. You are a citizen unique and extraordinary. Only yesterday, when asked during a hot debate over the sanctity of the Constitution, what you thought of amending it, you replied frankly, "I can hardly discuss it until I have read it." Whattaman!

VI.

Tizzledorfer, Jennie Mae—In January of the present year you shot your lover. It was an inexcusable crime; your story that you were lured to his apartment, a distance of 600 miles, was pretty feeble; all the evidence showed you to be a vain, whackey, heartless woman, but you did not write your memoirs for a tabloid. Lady, that's sumpin! What'll you have?

Premonition.

On comes the perfumed summer—
Romance will live again;
There'll be a moon-swept mountain,
There'll be a rose-swamped lane.
On comes my young Prince Charming . . .
And I'll bet ten to one
There'll be a young blond menace
Waiting to spoil my fun!

Total Eclipses

By William Lyon Phelps.

Next One 1963.

Today there is a total eclipse of the sun visible in Athens, Greece, and as far east as Japan.

In June, 1935, I was a guest at luncheon at the Henry Ford Hospital, in Detroit, of the chief surgeon, Dr. Roy McClure. He had two intimate friends with him, whose conversation interested me immensely. They are both famous engineers, Dr. Kettering and Dr. Stone. They have traveled all over the world, and seen nearly all there is to see.

I asked Dr. Stone if there was any single spectacle on earth more impressive than the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. He said it was the most impressive thing except one; the only sight more impressive was a total eclipse of the sun.

• • • •

I have seen only one total eclipse; that was on August 31, 1932, at Sorel, Canada. It lasted exactly 100 seconds.

Now, on June 7, 1937, there will be a total eclipse, best seen in the Pacific Ocean off the coast of Peru, that will last seven minutes.

We should all begin now to make preparations to see this sublime spectacle.

A fourth edition of an important book has just appeared, which all interested should read. This is called "Eclipses of the Sun," is written by Prof. S. A. Mitchell, of the University of Virginia, and published by the Columbia University Press, New York. It contains 520 pages, is copiously illustrated, and gives the history of eclipses, with all necessary information. The book is written in a style that is clear to the mind of the ordinary reader, like me. The numerous pictures add greatly to the interest and to the value of the book.

This is a standard work and this fourth edition brings it up to date. The last chapter deals with the eclipses of 1932 and 1934.

There are curious features about the places where total eclipses of the sun are visible. On June 29, 1927, a total eclipse was visible in England for the first time in 200 years! This eclipse lasted only seven-tenths of one minute, and in nearly every square mile in England the weather was bad.

There will not be a total eclipse visible in the United States until 1963.

Parents Who Backed Board's Stand on Questionnaire to set himself up as a dictator as absolute as Hitler in Germany or Stalin in Russia or Mussolini in Italy over people living within the shadow of the dome of the Capitol in the Capital of the United States.

Calls It Disgrace.

"In my opinion that is a disgrace to our system of government. As a matter of fact, it amounts to a breach of privileges and rights of the Senate for one member of the House to take it upon himself to send out questionnaires to the school teachers in this city and to make the appropriations for the support of the District of Columbia contingent upon their answers to his questionnaire—for a single member of either branch of Congress to take it upon himself to undertake to regulate the promotions of police officers in the District."

After lauding Senator Thomas for his work as chairman of the District sub-committee, Senator Clark said:

"I desire to give notice that at the next session of Congress, while I am not a member of either the Appropriation Committee or the District of Columbia Committee, I intend to resist any such attempt to impose a dictatorship upon a defenseless people who are under the protection of the Federal Government."

Copeland Joins In.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, intervened at this point with the suggestion that Clark open his attack immediately.

"I shall be glad to aid the Senator right now in opposing a dictatorship," he said. "I think it is an outrage the way the people of the District are treated as regards the operation of their city."

Subsequently Copeland paid tribute to Thomas for his patience in negotiations with the House conferees and in conducting hearings on the District bill. He then explained that he had not signed the conference report and had voted against its adoption because of the cut in the lump-sum payment.

Senator Robinson, the majority leader, added an indirect criticism at the chairman of the House conferees by praising the work of the Senate managers.

"In view of the history of the controversy relating to the District of Columbia appropriation bill," he said, "and the difficulties which have been encountered by the Senate conferees, I think they are entitled to a word of commendation.

"There is not any question in my mind but that they have resisted every unfair effort which has been made to prevent the conclusion of unjust legislation, and I think the result of the conference pretty well vindicates both their purposes and their efforts."

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, one of the conferees, in commenting on the compromise, said:

"In accepting the compromise which has been accepted at $5,000,000 I wish to have it clearly and distinctly understood that, as one of the conferees, I have not concluded that $5,000,000 is a fair share for the Federal Government in the appropriation for the District of Columbia."

The fiscal relations study authorized in the conference report is different from that proposed in a resolution adopted recently by the Senate. Instead of setting up a commission of three men, it leaves the investigation entirely to the President and grants him $50,000 from the Federal contribution to finance it.

Thomas' Proposal.

The plan agreed upon is exactly what Senator Thomas proposed in the beginning, and its adoption is an indication of the completeness of the Senate's victory over the House conferees.

While there was no official explanation of the sudden acquiescense of the House managers at yesterday's conference, observers concluded that it was brought about, oddly enough, by the school teacher questionnaire sent out by Blanton.

The Texan, realizing he was to be attacked on the House floor by a liberal bloc, was impatient to conclude the conference and to grant concessions to that end. In fact, he left the parley when informed that the Keller censure resolution had been called up and hurried to the House floor.

The only significant issue in which Blanton prevailed was the elimination of funds for continuation of character education. And the Senators, as well as school officials, did not appear keen about insisting upon its continuation.

Besides losing the fiscal relations fight, he was defeated in the House in his attempt to prevent District employes earning $2,400 a year (later raised to $3,500) from engaging in outside activities for pay.

The Senate yesterday prevailed in restoring personal service appropriations for the health and welfare department to Budget Bureau figures, and they even succeeded in reducing the restriction on salaries paid to officials of the local relief administration.

The fight over whether to increase the personnel of the Metropolitan Police Department, was compromised with a gain of 25 privates. The Senate had voted 50, and the House in its second set of proposals had agreed to 20.

All of the riders relating to traffic control, including authority for the District Commissioners to install park-o-meters were stricken out, however, as the House prevailed.

Among the appropriations lost from the Senate bill were funds to retain two assistant corporation counsel, additional employes for the Public Utilities Commission, public library funds, $4,000 additional for transportation of crippled and sightless children, a stadium and athletic field for Woodrow Wilson High School, and a marshal for the District Court of Appeals.

The Senate agreed to $15,000 as a compromise between $11,000 and $18,000 for smoke control. It succeeded in restoring to budget figures appropriations for contingent and miscellaneous expenses, the sewer department, the playground department, the community center department and the health and welfare departments.

Junior High Addition.

The Senate prevailed in retaining an appropriation of $165,000 for construction of an addition to Alice Deal Junior High School, $8,400 for paving certain sections of Runnymede place, an increase of $23,000 for Anacostia Junior High School equipment and $5,000 for the National Library for the Blind.

House conferees also backed down on their opposition to a Senate amendment which would allow pay patients to be admitted at Children's Tuberculosis Hospital, but this required a separate vote by the House.

The appropriation for unemployment relief was fixed at $1,600,000 as a compromise between $1,506,020 and $1,656,200.

The House prevailed in part on the salary restriction as the conferees agreed that not more than $200,000 shall be used for personal services. The House had originally fixed this limitation at $177,800, whereas the Budget Bureau has recommended $327,980.

Staff Faces Slash.

As a result of this restriction, the administrative staff either will have to be reduced or salaries must be cut.

A question as to whether the results of the fiscal relations study will be accepted by future Congresses or ignored as has been the 60-40 law was raised by Senator Clark during a discussion of the compromise plan.

He pointed out that the 60-40 act and other studies made by various Government agencies have been ignored or repudiated by committees of Congress.

Senator Thomas pointed out, in reply, that the study now authorized would have the effect of having been approved by both Houses of Congress, whereas past investigations have been authorized by only one chamber.

This view was concurred in by Senator Robinson.

"I frankly say that I doubt very much that there will be any greater efficacy in the plan now proposed than in the plan which was agreed upon several years ago," Clark stated.

He added that he was casting no reflection upon Senator Thomas or the Senate conferees and that he was satisfied that the compromise was the best that could be achieved at this session.

Iceland Is Visited By King Christian

Reykjavik, Iceland, June 18 (AP).—For the first time in six years this volcanic island in the North Atlantic played host tonight to its King, Christian of Denmark.

The Danish royal yacht Dannebrog steamed into the harbor this afternoon with the blue-red-white royal flag of Iceland at the masthead and with King Christian, only monarch in the world of two separate kingdoms, on the bridge.

His Majesty addressed a large crowd in Icelandic. He was received by government officials and almost every inhabitant of Reykjavik.

During his stay King Christian will make up for infrequent visits by attending a round of official and public receptions. He will make a lengthy automobile tour of certain districts. A good portion of the 120,000 inhabitants will have the opportunity of seeing him.

With the King came Queen Alexandrine, Prince Knud of Denmark and his wife, Princess Caroline Mathilde, and a large court retinue. Under the constitution granted in 1904 Iceland is independent of Denmark in internal affairs, with its own parliament and government.

than Tom Blanton to call you before the committee. His committee has no right to call you there, and the House of Representatives couldn't be induced to call you there.

"I wouldn't advise you to clutter up your waste baskets with that thing he sent you, but put it where it would be moved out of your sight quickly."

Keller reported his appearance before the House in favor of the resolution to censure Blanton, and read the resolution. He interpreted Speaker William B. Bankhead's ruling to kill the resolution on a point of order as evidence that the House did not consider Blanton's questionnaire as an authorized matter of business.

Speaker Bankhead had acted on a point raised by Representative Claude A. Fuller (Democrat), of Arkansas. Replying to Keller's charge that Blanton's action in sending out the questionnaire had lessened the dignity and violated the integrity of the House, Fuller said the integrity of the House was not at stake since Blanton had used his own judgment as chairman of the sub-committee on District appropriations.

Keller's remarks at the Board of Education meeting were applauded by the parents' representatives in the audience. Afterward, several of them spoke their confidence in the Board of Education and their opposition to Blanton.

The board, after inserting several amendments, passed a resolution originally submitted by Robert A. Maurer.

Its text follows:

Text of Resolution.

"The mailing of questionnaires to teachers and other employes, addressed to them as members of the school organization, makes it incumbent upon the Board of Education to state its position and to advise teachers as to their duties. The board is empowered by Congress to determine questions of educational policies, and to supervise the administration of all who are employed in the public school system of the District. That authority is subject, of course, at all times to the express will of Congress and it would be unthinkable for the board to fail in its duties scrupulously to observe and to carry out the acts of Congress.

"However, it seems to be clear that it is the duty of the board to protect all teachers and other employes from unauthorized inquisitions and to protest any invasion of their private rights when the channel of approach to them is through their official positions.

"The board notes that the questionnaire does not state that the inquiry is directed by a committee of Congress for the purposes of legislation and that the questions which are asked are official inquiries of a committee of Congress duly authorized by law to compel the information. It would seem that the will of Congress or a duly authorized committee to compel information of such unusual character, directed at the private opinions and beliefs of those of whom the inquiries are made, should be explicitly clear in order that there may be no doubt concerning the duty to respond, particularly when, as here, grave questions of constitutional liberty under the fourth and fifth amendments to the Constitution, are suggested.

"We, therefore, advise teachers and employes that they are free voluntarily to answer the questions asked, and advise them that if they do not desire to reply, they have a perfect right, in our opinion, not to do so, and that the fact that they reply or make no reply will have no bearing whatever upon their position, status and record in the public schools."

Attacked by Mrs. Doyle.

Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, president of the board, in calling the meeting to order, said she felt it the duty of the school trustees to give the teachers some advice on action they should take in regard to the questionnaire, which she labeled as "obviously a violation of social rights."

Mrs. Doyle reported that "some public-spirited citizen," who wished to remain anonymous, had pledged $500 for the defense of any teacher who would be called before Blanton's sub-committee for refusing to reply to the query.

In the final draft, all references to answering particular parts of the questionnaire were stricken out.

George M. Whitwell and Henry Gilligan led in the argument to make the resolution a strong one. Whitwell introduced the amendment assuring the teachers that "if they have no desire to reply they have a perfect right not to do so."

Mrs. Betty Lesser, of 1650 Fuller street northwest, who had asked many of the parents present to attend the meeting, said she wanted the board to know that she "as the mother of two children in school," was supporting any action taken to urge teachers not to answer Blanton's questions.

Mrs. C. R. Wright, representing the Alice Deal School P.-T. A., said: "I am getting tired of having my children called Communists. For the sake of the children I hope every teacher will tear Blanton's letter up."

Mrs. Wilbur LaRoe, speaking for the Forest Hills Citizens Association, said: "We feel this questionnaire is an insult to our teachers."

The teacher organizations which defied Blanton's threat to call their members before his sub-committee were the Education Association of the District of Columbia, and the Teachers' Union.

Harvard Talks Urge Freedom For Education

Three Get Degrees, Assail Politics in Schools at Tercentenary.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., June 18.—A university president, a member of the Harvard faculty and the Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Massachusetts urged academic freedom for the Nation's universities at a meeting of the Harvard Alumni Association today.

Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago; Samuel Elio Morison, of the Harvard faculty, and the Right Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, Episcopal Bishop of Massachusetts, opposed State control of American colleges "by politicians of any party."

Harvard conferred honorary degrees upon the three at its tercentenary year commencement earlier today.

Dr. Hutchins, in a prepared address, termed "freedom" the "indispensable prerequisite to the establishment of higher education on a rational basis."

He Decries Prejudice.

"The pursuit of knowledge cannot be directed by prejudice or even by legislation," Dr. Hutchins said.

"The State university which becomes the tool of a political faction ceases to be a university.

"• • • the fate of the American universities depends upon the maintenance of Harvard's tradition of freedom.

"I need not elaborate on the very precarious state of academic freedom and of political liberty in the world today," Prof. Morison said in his prepared address.

"• • • events of the last year or two have shown us that a large and powerful section of the body politic no longer wish their universities to be free; that many well-intentioned people even take so distorted a view of academic freedom as to regard it as an excuse for ineffective dilettantism, and a shield for political plots against the state."

Powhatan Roof Has Raincheck Cover Charge

Shoreham Cocktail Parties Feature Star-Gazing as Dusk Falls.

By Chanticleer.

The Powhatan Roof has made a thoughtful move in behalf of the customer.

That payment of a cover charge at the Powhatan is for the purpose of providing you with a rain check, a la baseball. If your evening under the stars turns into a couple of young folks under a shower before you have had a chance to get your money's worth, the rain check is good the next evening you wish to visit Ol' Massa Pete Macias and his men.

Who could ask for more?

• • • •

It's back-yard star gazing at the Shoreham these days. Its the new trend in cocktail parties. On the Shoreham Terrace a lot of folks are getting acquainted with the brightest of those early evening stars—Jupiter, so they say—very low in the southeastern sky at dusk.

A bit of news from the suburbs: The swimming pool at Maryland Club Gardens is now open. Most places just say: Dining and dancing. Not so at the Gardens. Its "dining, dancing and swimming, if you wish."

Despite the fact it's June and beyond the ordinary floor show season at La Paree, you'll find one there just the same. Honors go to the Parker Brothers and Lynn, best known for their slave dance. Curtis and Dubois, dance team, and Vicki Palmer, tap specialist, vary the pace of the show.

Ann Pennington has come and gone at the Cocoanut Grove; I understand, but that shouldn't influence you in deciding whether to go out some night this week. Ann may be gone, but those eight lovelies of the Ziegfeld type and the four show girls make a picture of pulchritude seldom seen in these poor parts. McCormick and Kidd head the principals, with McCormick serving as an unusually active master of ceremonies. Ruth Kidd is his dancing partner, and Easter and Hazleton and May Miller are spot-lighted in a variety of dance routines.

Col. Seth Williams Transferred to D. C.

Col. Seth Williams, now in the Quartermaster Corps of the Marines at Philadelphia, was ordered yesterday to this city to assist Brig. Gen. Matthews in the headquarters Marine quartermaster's office.

The Marine Corps also announced the transfers of Maj. Jacob M. Pearce from Marine barracks here to Galveston, Tex., and of Capt. Edward J. Ferrell from headquarters here to the U. S. S. Ranger

On the Air Today

Preliminary schedules for the broadcasts of the Democratic convention have arrived and it appears that the situation is well in hand. Few changes are expected.

The first broadcast will be at 9 a. m., Monday, when N. B. C. presents a few pre-convention views by Walter Lippman, Frazier Hunt, John B. Kennedy and Dorothy Thompson. At 9:30, N. B. C. will air a reception by Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania and Mayor Wilson of Philadelphia to visiting dignitaries.

C. B. S. joins the parade at 1:30, with a "man in the street" symposium of pre-convention opinion. C. B. S. also has a talk, "Behind the Sound and Fury," by Raymond Swing, scheduled for Monday night.

Tuesday sees the real opening of the convention from the auditorium floor, with both networks scheduling several pick-ups each day through Friday. More of this when the time comes.

They tell this one on Bob Burns. The Arkansan was attending the party given a few nights ago by George Burns and Gracie Allen (Burns) for Jack and Mary Benny, recently returned to Hollywood. A quiet-appearing gentleman approached Bob and said:

"My name is Gosden. I just wanted to tell you how much I've enjoyed your work on the air. And I hope you listen to mine, too."

"Why, sure," said Bob, very agreeably. "When does your show start?"

"Oh, it's been going on now 10 or 12 years, I guess, by this time. It's called 'Amos 'n' Andy.' I'm 'Amos.'"

Today's highlights:

Jane Cowl: Guests with "Frank Fay Calling," WMAL, at 7:30. They have decided there is a dearth of Shakespeare on the air these days and will do a scene from 'Romeo and Juliet," accordingly.

Oxford Group: From luncheon, with Mayor Wilson of Philadelphia, Carl Vrooman and A. S. Lowden Hamilton, WRC, at 12:30.

Lionel Barrymore: With Maureen O'Sullivan in a preview of "The Devil Doll," in "Hollywood Hotel," WJSV, at 8. With Dick Powell and others.

Father Coughlin: Speaks on "Why I Can't Support New Deal or Old Deal," WJSV, at 9:45.

"June Night": Selected as theme of "Red Horse Tavern" for tonight, WJSV, at 7. With Joan Marsh.

Our ear-to-the-ground department says that the "Mr. Watkins," who gives news comments over the Columbia net, is none other than John S. Young, formerly of N. B. C. Young worked with Ed Wynn on the Columbia net presentation before Wynn went back to N. B. C. and the services of Graham McNamee.

• • • •

Looking a bit ahead: Marion Davies has been signed for a "Radio Theater" presentation of "The Brat," for July 13 . . . Louise Massey and the Westerners, heard for many months on "Show Boat," will have a show of their own in the fall, in the program starring Conrad Thibault last winter . . . "Molasses and January" have signed a 13-week renewal with "Show Boat" which would seem to spike the rumor that this veteran was leaving the air.

• • • •

Final word: Eddie Cantor, according to telegraphic word, will be heard in a new show under the banner of the late Ed Wynn show sponsorship, next September.

Culbertson on Bridge

Choosing the Contract.

The hand I am presenting today was sent to me by Thomas H. Peebles, of Boston, Mass., to illustrate excellent deduction and clever "squeezing" by a declarer at a small slam contract in no trump.

I have no reason to cavil at the statement that the hand was exceedingly well played. The description of the play, given below, speaks for itself. The more important point about this hand, however, is that it preaches a sermon, which is just this: No trump slam contracts, unless 12 tricks are cold, usually require absolute perfection in play. The average player is not up to difficult squeeze plays and therefore it is only the better part of wisdom for him to choose contracts that will not offer involved problems.

Compare the tortuous line of play necessary at six no trump with the simple line at six hearts, and my meaning will become crystal clear.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 club	Pass	2 hearts	Pass
3 clubs	Pass	3 dimds.	Pass
4 no trp.	Pass	5 no trp.	Pass
6 no trp.	Pass	Pass	Pass

The queen of spades was opened and taken by North, who finessed the ten of hearts. West, winning, returned a spade which was taken by North, who discarded a diamond from dummy.

The deuce of diamonds was led and the queen successfully finessed and the king of hearts was laid down. Since the queen dropped, the remainder of the hearts was played out, West discarding two small spades. North reasoned that West was protecting four clubs to the jack, and so discarded his four and three of clubs. The North hand now was entered with a club and and the ace, king and queen played out, leaving North with two cards, the four of diamonds and the deuce of spades. West was left with the two minor suit jacks, and dummy with the ace-10 of diamonds. East, becoming squeezed, had to bare his diamond king or part with his spade. If West had saved a spade and thrown the jack of diamonds, North could take the A-10 finesse against the diamond king.

Incidentally, a diamond opening and a diamond return by West when on lead with the heart jack would have scotched the eventual squeeze and defeated the contract.

Now let us consider the simple play at six hearts. Regardless of the opening lead, South merely would have to take the diamond finesse (also necessary at six no trump) and ruff one diamond in the dummy. The queen of clubs and king of spades would provide tricks for the discarding of the other two diamonds. The only conditions necessary to success would be a reasonable break in hearts and a successful finesse against the diamond king.

An infinitely easier contract to play, I should say, than six no trump.

D. C. Drops Charge In Gambling Case

Gambling charges against John M. Cornell, 32, were dropped in the District Supreme Court yesterday when Assistant United States Attorney Roger Robb entered a "nolle prosse" against him, although seven others named in the same indictment were found guilty and now are serving jail sentences.

Cornell was absent when the others were placed on trial, his attorney, J. Chase McKenzie, explaining that he was in Florida unaware that he was to be placed on trial. By the time he came to the District, the trial had been concluded and his co-defendants found guilty.

The case in which Cornell was involved was the one in which Representative Thomas L. Blanton figured. The Representative stated on the floor of the House that there was a gambling institution operating within the shadow of the Capitol and a raid resulted. Cornell said he operated a cigar store beneath the alleged gaming institution and was not connected with it.

The raid, made in October, 1934, attracted Nation-wide interest.

Johnson's Estate Exceeds $230,000

An estate of slightly more than $230,000 was left by Dr. Hayden Johnson, former chancellor of the National University and one-time president of the Board of Education, it was disclosed in the District Supreme Court yesterday when his will was filed.

Dr. Johnson, who also was a member of the committee charged with examining applicants for admission to the District bar, named his wife, Mrs. Jeannette Johnson, as principal beneficiary. He asked that his secretary, Mrs. Alice K. Conner, be given $2,500 and then directed that the remainder of his estate be given the widow to do with as she pleased.

The will nominated the National Savings & Trust Co. and Vernon E. West, now acting corporation counsel, as trustees. The estate consisted chiefly of stocks and bonds.

Britain Agrees to Build Queen Mary Sister Ship

London, June 18 (AP).—Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, announced in the House of Commons today that the British Government had agreed "in principle" to the construction of a sister ship to the S. S. Queen Mary.

The chancellor said the Cunard-White Star Line had applied for authority to enter into an agreement for the sister ship.

Newly Invented Color Process Proves a Boon

Cuts Time and Cost While Recording Exact Tints; Tried in Newsreel.

By the United Press.

Chicago, June 18.—The problem of cost, time and quality—bugaboo of color motion pictures—has been solved by a new process of producing movies in color, it was announced tonight.

The inventors are Robert Hoyt, 31, and Leon Ungar, 26. For two years they experimented and tested the process, at times running so low in funds they didn't eat. Finally a Hollywood studio became interested, offering them the use of its laboratories, and the process was perfected there.

When they were sure of themselves, they put their plan to the ultimate film test—production of a newsreel—and found it had everything.

The newsreel was shot Saturday at the Texas Centennial opening, where Hoyt and Ungar had gone to film a color pageant of high spots in Texas history. Handicapped by makeshift equipment, they made a 350-foot reel, catching all the brilliance and pageantry of the carnival celebration.

Makes Speed Record.

Six hours later the film was presented on the screen of a Dallas theater—the first time a color-sound newsreel had been shown simultaneously with black-and-white pictures of the same scene.

The Telco process will slice the present staggering cost of color picture production to approximately the same level as black-and-white films, the inventors claim. In addition it will speed production, improve quality and adapt itself to any regular production circumstances because:

1. It can reproduce any color, including natural skin tints, most difficult of all for the color camera.
2. It can take pictures under any light strong enough for black-and-white cameras.
3. It can develop pictures six hours after they are photographed.

Cuts Time and Cost.

Color films, as produced now, are one of the biggest headaches, financially and technically, to an industry accustomed to talking in terms of millions and to accomplishing the impossible. Their manufacture requires five times as much light as ordinary pictures, necessitating short "takes" because of the extreme heat (around 130 degrees); needs four to five days to develop a strip of film in an expensive printing process, and, finally, transforms on the screen the light colored skin of Ann Harding, say, into the epidemeris of a Sioux Indian.

While technicians develop the films, set must be kept standing until the final product can be scanned to see if "re-takes" are necessary.

With their telco process, Hoyt and Ungar have demonstrated, the industry can say good-by to all that.

Chairman of FDIC To Quit After Election

De Pere, Wis., June 18 (AP).—Leo T. Crowley said in an interview today he would resign his position as chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation after the November election to return to private business in Madison.

Most of the emergency work of the FDIC was completed, he said, and if the FDIC were to be liquidated today, it could pay a 3 per cent dividend. He asserted the corporation was self-supporting and making money from its investments and memberships.

Schacht Aid Will Seek U. S. Tariff Reductions

Berlin, June 18 (AP).—Dr. Rudolf Brinkmann, one of the directors of the Reichsbank, will sail for the United States next week in the hope of persuading Washington to cancel duties against German goods announced June 6.

Dr. Brinkmann, who will be accompanied by one or two experts, is the right-hand man of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, minister of economics, on foreign exchange questions.

He may attempt to negotiate a new German-American trade treaty.

Appear in Napoleonic Romance

When "Heart's Divided" opens on the screen of the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater today for a week's engagement, there will be spread upon the silver sheet the romantic love story of Betsy Patterson, of Baltimore, and Jerome Bonaparte, brother of the Emperor Napoleon. The pivotal figures of Bonaparte and Betsy are played for the cameras by Dick Powell and Marion Davies, pictured above in the scene in which the bride, for political reasons, is forbidden to land upon the soil of France—thus providing the picture's expository title.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Betty Read.

Civil Service Commission employes are at work over at the Rural Electrification Administration classifying positions as ground work for the advent of the merit system.

Last May the administration, under the rural Electrification act, was established on a ten-year program which called for civil service, allowing latitude in this matter for the employment of "lawyers, engineers and experts." Whether or not these workers will come from the civil service rolls is at the discretion of the administrator, Morris L. Cooke.

After classification of jobs is finished, another set of civil service examiners will come into the office at 2000 Massachusetts avenue and 1517 K street to classify those in the present jobs. It is expected that although they eventually will go under the merit system, those now holding jobs will be continued in their present places. They probably will be "blanketed-in," as the saying is, under an executive order which will start the system in operation.

But the civil service activity is not the only one going on around the offices. A little device to make life more worth living in the summer months is being recommended by the officials. This would mean more comfort in eating outdoors in the garden or the porch and the number of "foreign bodies" to be picked out of the ice cream would be almost non-existent, for this new device is an electric bug-catcher.

While it was primarily designed for use on farms and particularly in orchards, it still has its uses around the house.

David S. Weaver, the liaison man between the administration and the Department of Agriculture, says the lantern-like bug catcher which looks somewhat like the cage in which Polly, the parrot, lives, was first designed to cut down the millions of dollars worth of damage the coddling moth has done in orchards all over the country.

It is a strong light inside an electrically wired cage. The moths and other pests are attracted by the light at night—the only time they fly—and are promptly electrocuted by a current which would only make a person's fingers tingle. It is so new a development in scientific farming that it is not in use except in a few places.

Bees and ants, Weaver explained, are among the most useful insects to the farmer, but they are so well-behaved that they are in their hives and out of danger when the electric trap is turned on. Only the marauders are flying about at night.

"Then, we are experimenting on the use of an electric fence to keep animals from wandering away from their pastures," Weaver said, "we have not made up our minds how valuable this will be but it is worth consideration."

The electric fence, he explained, is a single wire charged with low-voltage electricity, which is stretched around any part of a farm. Animals are much more sensitive to electric shocks than humans—with the exception of sheep, which are insulated by their woolen coats—and in consequence, one touch of the wire and they stay where the farmer wants to keep them. The experiment has shown that after a couple of days, the charged wire can be replaced with an ordinary one and the animals will not approach it.

The percentage of farms around the District which are wired for electricity has increased during the past few years, it was stated. Maryland has 18 per cent of her farms electrified, Virginia 9 per cent and Pennsylvania, 25 per cent.

Moonlight cruises are becoming quite the rage and for one on Tuesday night the announcement guarantees a new moon. It is the party of the Internal Revenue Lodge, No. 47, of the American Federation of Government Employes. The boat will leave the Seventh street wharf at 8:45 on June 23 and return around midnight.

The latest report, only a few days old, from the Civil Service Commission shows that 39 States, Puerto Rico, Hawaii and Alaska are entitled to more civil service employes than they now have. The quota in only two States is filled, while a few are in excess. Total appointments in the District are 38,140, of which 382 have been added since the last report, a couple weeks ago. By transfer and separation there have been 76 losses in that time. While Virginia and Maryland are in excess of the quota, other States around the District are in arrears, including North and South Carolina, Pensylvania and Kentucky.

Andrew W. Cruse, chief of the electrical division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, will be the principal speaker tonight at the convention in Chicago of the Radio Manufacturers of America. He left Washington Wednesday at attend to some bureau business before the convention.

2 Armed Bandits Rob Man in Front of Home

Jacob Feldman, 137 Tennessee avenue northeast, was robbed of $136 yesterday by two armed bandits when he stepped from his car in front of his home.

Feldman told police the robbers approached him and asked him for a match. One of the men then pulled a gun while the other searched his pockets. Both escaped in an automobile.

Claire Trevor, WhenFatigued, Calls Princess

Titled Russian Is Stand-in; Fred Astaire's Tin Ear; Notes From Coast.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, June 18.—When Claire Trevor, wide-eyed movie blonde, shifts a load off her dogs at the end of a scene, a princess takes her place under the hot lights until the next one is set.

There should be a moral in that somewhere, but it probably only proves Hollywood is a dizzy, topsy-turvy sort of place, and that has been proved before, often.

The princess is Galina Krapotkina, known to the movie trade as Galina Liss. Liss doesn't mean anything. It's just a name she made up for herself, and she is working as Trevor's stand-in because she needs the dough.

Krapotkina isn't a working princess any more because she has no constituents. Even when she did work at the trade it didn't last long, for the constituents chased her papa and mama, Mr. and Mrs. Alexis Krapotkin out of Russia when Galina was only 6 years old.

Was a Translator.

The girl scrambled together an education in Czechoslovakia, Paris and Berkeley, Calif., and was making an honest living translating Czechoslovakian books into English for the Los Angeles Public Library when she got a chance to work for Trevor.

Making things easy for a movie actress pays more, although not too much more, than working for the library.

She got the job because Arline Judge's princess, we mean standin, a girl called Arline Ryan, has an aunt who was a schoolmate of La Krapotkina's mother somewhere.

Miss Liss says her grandparents, Prince Alexis and Princess Alice Krapotkin, live in San Francisco, and her second cousin, Princess Alexandra Krapotkin, writes a woman's column in a national magazine retailing for five cents.

Boys Will Be Boys!

Fred Astaire is walking around with a red ear because Victor Moore's right arm isn't what it once was.

Frolocking in the phony show covering a synthetic section of the Adirondack Mountains inside an RKO sound stage, Moore was required to pop off Astaire's high hat with a snowball for a scene of "Never Gonna Dance." He said he was an expert snowballer, and couldn't miss, but he did.

The snowball was the only real winter prop, being made of frost scrapped off refrigerator pipes and carefully packed in ice until Astaire was posed.

In case you are interested, there is one sure way to spot imitation movie show in the finished film. Watch the actors' feet. Real snow sticks and balls on the foot. Gypsum or uncooked cornflakes do not.

That same Astaire, who never went completely Hollywood, is fast going Tin Pan Alley. He has just written his second song, "I'll Never Let You Go," in collaboration with Dave Dreyer, and you'll soon be hearing it on the air. His first, "I'm Building Up to an Awful Letdown," was by way of being a hit.

Miss Jean Goes to Town.

Jean Arthur, New York girl who took a pretty pushing around in Hollywood for 10 years, has finally come into her own. She has just started in Columbia's "Adventure in Manhattan," and is in demand on every lot in town.

Arthur came here in 1925 at 17, and for years on end was given nothing but bits, or at best leads in unimportant pictures. The turning point was her part opposite Gary Cooper in Frank Capra's "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," followed by "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford," with William Powell.

Since then Cecil B. DeMille has cast her as "Calamity Jane" for "The Plainsman," and RKO, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Fox are reportedly trying to borrow her.

Broadway

By

Ed Sullivan

Dawn Patrol.

New York, June 18.

Once upon a time, producers of Stem entertainment were Klaw and Erlanger, Dillingam, B. S. Moss . . . Today, the panorama has changed . . .

Now we have Jock Whitney, the Rockefellers, Vincent Astor, Jimmy Donahue, Dan Topping and young Walter Chrysler moving into the field once dominated by the professionals . . . Arrival of Vincent Astor, the young millionnaire on the Broadway and Hollywood scene is cheering . . . They bring to the twin industries of stage and celluloid fresh bankrolls, fresh enthusiasms, fresh slants . . . They bring good taste, more important than everything . . . It was natural that these young millionaires should enter these fields . . . As stockholders of various banks, they saw the banks turn to Hollywood and Broadway as money outlets, and they reasoned that if the banks estimated entertainment as a money-maker, thar must be gold in them thar hills . . . All of them are following in the footsteps of Dwight Derre Wiman, millionaire heir to the Moline, Ill., plow fortunes, who not only invaded the theater, but established himself in the production foreground.

* * * *

There are three chorines on Broadway who hit a new low in any intelligence test . . . One of them refused caviar on the ground that she wasn't drinking . . . Early this morning, at the Kit-Kat Club, they were discussing other classic remarks of this numb blonde . . . "Nobody could be that daffy," I argued . . . Just then the girl walked in with a party and sat down at a ringside table . . . "Watch this," said one of the crowd at our table . . . He wrote out a note: "Call Mr. Cadaver at Lexington 2-3400," sent it over to the girl . . . She read it, raced to the phone, and in five minutes returned, downcast . . . She had called Mr. Cadaver at the City Mortuary Chapel and the morgue keeper evidently had given her a tongue-lashing for waking him up at 3:30 a. m. . . . On the way out, she told the headwaiter earnestly: "If that Mr. Cadaver calls again, tell him to call me at my house in 15 minutes."

* * * *

At 3 p. m. I was at the offices of Mike Jacobs to buy some tickets for the fight . . . The hallways were crowded with veterans of the rought art . . . The rooms were jammed with newspaper men . . . "That Schmeling has promised he won't be afraid," said one veteran . . . The gentry thereupon praised the German lavishly . . . At this amazing outburst of praise for a professional fighter who promised not to be afraid, a lean chap standing near the box office window snickered out loud and then laughed fit to bust . . . "I think," said the lean chap, when he smothered his guffaws, "that you brethren of the profession should draw up a resolution of appreciation for these heavyweights. It is very nice of them to promise they will not be scared to death, inasmuch as they are paid close to $150,000 to swap punches."

* * * *

The lean chap went off into another gale of laughter . . . He was Detective Johnny Broderick, and reviewing his record, you can understand why the though of a trained 200-pound fighter being afraid of another 200-pound fighter sent him off into a swoon of merriment . . . In a street fight, Broderick would be six, two and even to flatten Louis and Schmeling within 15 minutes and I'm not fooling; because this Broderick is a rough, tough sort of a fellow.

* * * *

Most of the men in Commissioner Valentine's police department are rabid sporting fans . . . But from Valentine down to the lowliest rookie, they are puzzled by these heavyweight fighters who are scared to fight . . . "They only fight with gloves," said Lieut. Mickey McNamara, "what have they got to be afraid of?" . . . The department aces, accustomed to chasing tough fellows over roofs and into alleys which may prove to be the last mile they'll ever tread, are positively amazed that men who will be hit with nothing but boxing gloves are scared . . . The picture of Max Baer, taking the count on one knee, is fresh in the minds of the police department . . . The day after that dreadful exhibition of cowardice, one of the detectives filed the newspaper picture of Baer in the Rogue's Gallery on Center street . . . When the man in charge of the picture gallery came upon it filed under the "B's," he found scrawled across it: "Public Enemy No. 1."

* * * *

Theus Munds, wealthy Wall Streeter, is making it very tough on the other Romeos of the Stem . . . Most of them can just about afford to take a girl out . . . Theus not only takes the girl out, but also invites along the parents . . . Last night he so treated Nancy Lee, Paradise redhead, and her dad and maw . . . Stemmers with shorter bank rolls than Munds' agree that the Wall Streeter has established a dangerous precedent . . . They are thinking of drawing up a petition to him.

Nelson B. Bell

About The Showshops

WHEN Jack Benny was in the Capital for a week of personal stage appearances at Loew's Fox Theater—assisted by his wife, Mary Livingstone, Georges Metaxa and divers and sundry others—not so many months ago, he was on the ragged edge of a nervous breakdown as a result of the driving requirements of his vaudeville work and radio broadcasts. He also was in a slight dither over the matter of the Treasury Department's exorbitant income tax demands upon those whose salaries occupied the upper brackets. He pointed out that the more he earned the less he had—a paradox that would have delighted the late Gilbert K. Chesterton, because it happened to work out to be true.

BELL.

It was pointed out by Mr. Benny that the stage and radio artists earning from $50,000 to $100,000 per year had more left for themselves after income tax payments than the seemingly more fortunate players who garnered gross incomes far in excess of those amounts. Above $100,000, the chief winner is your Uncle Sam.

The solution that suggested itself to Mr. Benny while he was here was to cut out working so hard and fraying the nerves until they resembled the fringe on a Spanish shawl and make a picture or two a year, live quietly and comfortably in Hollywood and let it go at that. Something of the sort seems finally to have come about.

Paramount has exercised its option on the Benny services for two additional pictures to follow "The Big Broadcast of 1937," which goes into production next Monday. His second picture for Paramount will be "College Holiday," which Harlan Thompson will produce from a script based on an original story by himself and Frederick Hazlett Brennan.

Negotiations are said now to be under way to take Benny Goodman's "swing" band across the continent to Hollywood to furnish the orchestral background for the spirited action of this Jack Benny picture. Tests also are being made in New York of a number of musical comedy and night club comedians with the possibility of their supporting the daddy funny man of them all.

For the sake of the billing, it would be all right not to get too many Bennys mixed up in the proceedings—Jacks, Goodmans, Rubins, or what have you.

* * * *

What with Ozzie Nelson and His Orchestra, with Harriet Hilliard and other popular members of the Nelson troupe, booked for the stage of Loew's Fox the week of Friday, July 3, and all, it is worth bearing in mind that this richly endowed young Hilliard person is the charmingly ingenuous singing comedienne who appeared with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in "Follow the Fleet." That was her first picture and on the basis of the excellence of her work opposite Randolph Scott in it, a bright future in the cinema is believed to stretch away before her, if she ever again tires of singing with the boy friend's band.

* * * *

The Municipal Theater Association in St. Louis, Mo., not that it matters, is reputedly only one short leap ahead of a well defined case of the jitters because "Kid Boots," the Municipal Opera's initial production of the 1936 season, played to only 73,000 persons in ten nights.

That, indeed, is tough going. (I am laughing!) The capacity of St. Louis' al fresco theater, of course, is considerably more than "Kid Boots" drew, but 73,000 cash customers are not to be sneezed at, even on nights as cool as those which kept the attendance down. With a seating capacity of 10,000, the average evening's crowd at the outdoor theater was more than 7,000.

"Kid Boots," it will be recalled by the faithful, opened in the National Theater here, with Eddie Cantor starred under the banner of the late Flo Ziegfeld, and was the production that brought George Olsen and his orchestra and Ethel Shutta, Mrs. Olsen, East from the Puget Sound country. It was the middle of the week before a place could be found for the band in the regular routine of the show. The first night or two it merely furnished entr'acte music—and scored a tremendous hit in so doing.

In the St. Louis production, lovers of light musical entertainment had opportunity to enjoy the work of a pretty fair journeyman cast of principals, as such things go—Georgie Price, in the Cantor role; Vivienne Segal, Joseph Macauley, June O'Dea, Audrey Christie, Carl Randall, Detmar Poppen and others of like ilk. Whatever an ilk is.

If you care to go back that far, last season's "Venus in Silk," that folded unnecessarily at the National Theater when Larry Schwab experienced a sudden attack of chilblains, was originally a St. Louis Municipal Opera production, staged by Gene Ford, present manager of Loew's Fox Theater.

It's a small world is what I always say.

Comes a tiny card from Master Robert Crandall Payette, who, at the age of two weeks, wishes it known that he now is at home at 5910 Sixteenth street. By an odd coincidence, that happens to be also the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Payette. Bobbie writes a swell hand for one of his age.

Dots and Dashes.

Charlie Brennan, manager of the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater, is on the ailing list . . . Nelson Smith, the old reliable wheelhorse, is acting manager in the interim . . . Al Waldron, Washington cameraman, rendered hors de combat by the rigors of the Ethiopian campaign, and Mrs. Waldron, both recently critically ill, are on the mend . . . "Hearts Divided," in which Marion Davies and Dick Powell open on the screen at the Earle today, was made in the early days of sound on the screen with Dolores Costello—Mrs. John Barrymore, once removed—in the title role . . . It was called "Glorious Betsy" then . . . Then was April 29, 1928 . . . The "talkies" have come along a bit since that remote day . . . Or had you noticed?

Betty Hill, Director King Vidor's script girl, rehearsing Jean Parker to play a scene in "The Texas Ranger." Miss Hill always rehearses Director Vidor's leading ladies, and is a good dramatic coach . . . Director Frank Capra always has Joe Walker for his cameraman, and Robert Riskin, who writes Capra's scenarios, never goes on the set to watch the shooting . . . Madelein Carroll, on the set, can always be seen talking to a male, but seldom to a female.

Robert Taylor stands on the set looking at an enlarged photograph of a section of New York which is being used as a backdrop in his flicker . . . "I want to see some of the places I visited," said Taylor . . . He says that his trip to New York was hectic . . . People attacked him . . . The taxi driver had to run the cab up on the sidewalk so Taylor could enter a building . . . He needed police protection . . . An admirer took his tie, others pulled buttons off him, and others tried to tear the flaps of his pockets . . . "I would have felt terrible," said Taylor, "if they didn't do it."

* * * *

New York is really a hick town judging from the manner in which they go for movie stars . . . Hollywood is accustomed to actors and actresses, and all the fans ask for is an autograph, probably to discover if the movie players can write . . . New York mobs a movie star and makes a holiday . . . Actors and directors, who go practically unnoticed here, are immediately interviewed and on all subjects when they arrive in the metropolis . . . New York's attitude has an effect on the movie producers, for they rate a star's popularity by his reception in New York.

Secretaries should be interested in Hollywood. There are many girls who come here, not to be actresses, but to be secretaries . . . The various groups can almost be typed . . . There's the scenario writer's secretary . . . She reflects the temperament of the writer. She may drink with him . . . Discuss the story with him . . . Then she must be prepared to stay late at night and work. And I mean work . . . The actor's secretary has the manners and the makeup of the actor . . . Whe she's upset, it's a certain sign that the actor is upset . . . They know plenty and seldom talk, for they know they wouldn't get another job.

A director's secretary is often also his script girl . . . Se knows the director's whims and his method of making a picture . . . She tries to acquaint the performers with the director's style and mannerisms . . . Always on Director Van Dyke's set you can expect to see Florence Thomas. And by looking at Florence you can tell whether Van Dyke is having a hard day and "takes" are going wrong . . . Josef von Sternberg's secretary, Mickey McGary, is one of the highest salaried . . . Mickey manages all of Von Sternberg's business and personal matters. He considers her more important to him than Marlene Dietrich . . . One of Makeup's Modern Miracles

This particular "before and after" study shows the metamorphosis worked by makeup upon Jean Hersholt in the stellar role of "Sins of Man." On the left is a late portrait of the distinguished character actor as he really looks today; on the right, the old, disheveled man he impersonates in the picture. Glue, strips of tissue soaked in collodion, grease paint and crepe hair played their parts in this complete transmogrification. "Sins of Man" opens on the screen at Loew's Fox Theater today as chief film feature for the new week.

Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, president of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, will be sent to the Democratic National Convention at Philadelphia to assist Commissioner George Allen in his efforts to obtain a plank in the Democratic platform granting the franchise to citizens of the District.

Mrs. Worrell will leave for Philadelphia Monday afternoon, W. I. Swanton, secretary of the association, announced yesterday.

3 Seized for Shadowing Litvinoff Plot Suspects

Berne, Switzerland, June 18 (AP).—Three men were held by police tonight on charges of shadowing suspected plotters against the life of Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet commissar for foreign affairs and outstanding European diplomat.

Jean Ernest Planque, a Swiss, was arrested at Lausanne; Thomas Nordmann, a Dane, at Zurich, and a third man at Geneva, where police said the trio kept watch on the movements of persons they suspected of plotting an attack on the Soviet delegation to the League of Nations.

The men were said to have been shadowing a "Mr. K.," described as a Czechoslovakian and an enemy of the Soviet.

Pope Pius Inducts 6 New Cardinals

Vatican City, June 18 (AP).—Pope Pius presided today over the long ceremony of a public consistory in which he conferred the red hat upon six new cardinals.

Those honored included two of his literary friends, Mgrs. Giovanni Mercati and Eugenio Tisserant.

The Pontiff, who is 79, on receiving the cardinals last night, spoke of the "few days the Lord may deign still to grant me." Today he went through the ritual of the public consistory and then presided at a secret consistory following it without showing more than the usual tiredness.

The other new cardinals are Enrico Sibilia, papal nuncio in Vienna; Francesco Marmaggi, nuncio in Warsaw; Luigi Maglioni, nuncio in Paris, and Federico Tedeschini, nuncio to Spain.

Thousands of priests and civilians attended the ceremony in the huge Cathedral of St. Peter's and cheered as the Pope was borne in on a golden throne.

Escaped Felon Seized As He Calls for Bonus

Albert R. Heikkila, 36, of Calumet, Mich., was arrested at the Veterans' Bureau yesterday when he appeared to inquire about his bonus bonds. Heikkila had escaped from an Ionia, Mich., institution for the criminally insane.

The man was arrested by Detective Sergt. Michael Dowd when he was recognized by a building guard. Heikkila told Dowd he had slept in swamps for three nights and finally arrived here on a freight train. He said he "would not go back."

Windows Are Shattered In Asheville Hailstorm

Asheville, N. C., June 18 (AP).—A severe hailstorm, coming up suddenly this afternoon, broke hundreds of windows here and drove visitors to the annual rhododendron festival to cover.

The storm lasted about six minutes.

Stones ranging up to 4½ inches in circumference cracked plate-glass store fronts and shattered numerous panes on the north side of buildings.

In the American National Bank Building 14 of 23 windows were shattered. Some were completely broken out.

The white stones covered Patton avenue in the heart of the city. Several blocks were roped off by police because of the danger broken windows would fall on passers.

Boy, 15, Shoots Self.

Eugene Luckett, 15, 600 block of Fern street northwest, accidentally shot himself in the left hand yesterday while examining a revolver in the home of his employer in the 1300 block of Floral street northwest, police reported last night. The boy was treated at Walter Reed Hospital.

Miss Dean Wed To Prof. Stone At St. John's

Engagement of Her Sister Is Announced by Mother at Reception.

At the reception following the wedding yesterday of Miss Hellen Elizabeth Dean to Prof. George Winchester Stone, jr., the engagement of the former's sister, Miss Mary Owen Dean, to Lieut. L. Dick Scott, U. S. M. C., son of Mr. Robert Dick Scott, of Seattle, was announced by her mother, Mrs. Paul Stanley Dean, of Seattle and Washington.

Miss Mary Dean was her sister's maid of honor at her marriage, which took place at St. John's Episcopal Church at 8:30 o'clock, the Rev. James F. Madison officiating.

Te bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Mills Dean, wore a wedding gown of ivory satin fashioned on princess lines which belonged to the mother of the bridegroom, and a tulle veil fastened with a cap of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Dean wore a white and silver print organdy over a yellow slip, and carried shasta daisies and blue larkspur. The bridesmaids were Miss Virginia Dean, another sister of the bride, Mrs. Edward Wade Vesey, and Mrs. Edmund S. Meany, jr., who wore gowns similar to that of the maid of honor over slips of green.

The best man was Mr. Augustine Winnemore and the ushers included Mr. A. Wayne Van Lur, Mr. Courtland Baker, Mr. William Dynes, Mr. Howard Wade Vesey and Mr. Richard Squire.

A reception at the Washington Club followed the ceremony. Assisting in receiving were the mother of the bride, who wore a gown of yellow and brown print chiffon, and the mother of the bridegroom, who wore green lace.

Mr. and Mrs. Stone left after the reception for a two weeks' motor trip through New England. The bride wore a suit of brown taffeta with matching accessories. Upon their return they will make their home at 1832 Biltmore street.

Mrs. Stone is a graduate of the University of Washington at Seattle and has done graduate work at George Washington University. Mr. Stone attended Dartmouth College and received his M. A. degree from Harvard University.

Kitty Barrett Will Be Bride

News Writer to Be Wed July 2 to Raymond Helgeson.

Miss Kitty Barrett, daughter of Mrs. Robert Randolph Meyer, of Birmingham, Ala., and the late Mr. Edward Ware Barrett, will be married July 2 to Mr. Raymond Helgesen, of New York, son of Mrs. Henry T. Helgesen, of Boston, and the late Mr. Helgesen. Announcement of the engagement is of particular interest in journalistic circles of the Capital as both have been in newspaper work here.

Miss Barrett, whose father was for many years owner and editor of the Birmingham Age-Herald, attended the Westover School and Sarah Lawrence College. Her mother, the former Miss Lewis Butt, of Augusta, Ga., is a first cousin of the late Maj. Archibald W. Butt, who was aid to President Theodore Roosevelt and later to President Taft. Miss Barrett is a member of the Junior League and the Spinsters Cotillion Club of Birminham.

She is the sister of Mr. Edward W. Barrett, jr., a member of the Washington staff of News Week, and with her brother has been residing here for the past two years, and on the staff of a Washington paper.

Mr. Helgesen, who is now connected with the New York American, was formerly city editor of a Washington paper. His father was for many years Representative from North Dakota.

The wedding will take place at the home of Mrs. Meyer in Birmingham. Mr. Helgesen and his bride will reside in Greenwich, Conn., after their marriage.

Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

The attractions of London under the new and young King Edward VIII are luring Americans away from our summer resorts. The latest of American social leaders to go to London instead of Bar Harbor, as in other seasons, is Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, wife of one of the Morgan partners and formerly Mrs. Oliver Cromwell, of Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Stotesbury will close their Chestnut Hill home, White Marsh Hall, in Philadelphia, the end of the month and go to England. Mrs. Stotesbury also will be accompasied by Miss Beatrice English, daughter of Mrs. Frederick W. English, of Philadelphia, a frequent visitor to Washington.

Mrs. English Gordon, sister of Miss English, well known in Washington when she was the first wife of Basil Gordon, son of Mrs. George Barnett, also will go to Europe to join Miss Ruth Hitchcock, daughter of the late Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, of Nebraska, in Paris early in July. Mrs. Gordon spends part of each season in Washington, often as a guest of close friends here, including Mrs. Newbold Noyes, her former sister-in-law; Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Finkensteadt, of Georgetown; Mrs. Richard Oulahan and Miss Hitchcock, on Massachusetts avenue.

Washington women who, of course, have no vote, are apt to center attention on the political fortunes of women of nearby Virginia and Maryland. Therefore the appointment of Mrs. Harry T. Phoebus, of College Park, wife of the State Senator, as a member of the Maryland Motion Picture Board of Censors, has been hailed in social and organization centers of Washington.

Mrs. Phoebus at present is attending the home makers course at the University of Maryland. She has taken consistent interest in interstate home-making projects of Maryland and the District of Columbia, and frequently has spoken before women's clubs here.

Washington official and social circles paid tribute yesterday to the part taken in Capital life for several decades by Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida, who died suddenly on Wednesday, and Mrs. Fletcher.

It was Mrs. Fletcher in the early days of the Congressional Club who was the leader of a valiant group of women brave enough to accept the offer of the site on which the clubhouse now stands from the late Mrs. John B. Henderson. As one of the first presidents of the club, Mrs. Fletcher did much to increase its membership and put it on a solid foundation.

When the Fletchers lived next door to the German Embassy on Massachusetts avenue, their home was a center of gayety due to the presence of their daughters, Miss Nell Fletcher, now Mrs. Smith-Gordon, and Miss Louise Fletcher, now Mrs. Thomas C. Kemp, of St. Louis.

Poets Extraordinary.

The return of Lady Broderick, wife of the late Sir John Broderick, at one time attached to the British Embassy in Washington and later His Majesty's Minister to Cuba, reminds us that Sir John was one of the best read, the most cultured and incidentally the most popular of British diplomats stationed here. He was a lover of fine poetry and could read it with grace and distinction. He wrote poetry, too, and so did their daughter, Miss Sheila, whom Lady Broderick is visiting. It is recalled her father added "Maria" to her name of Sheila so she might have a saint's name as well.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Posed by Grace Bradley.

By Mignon.

(The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.)

IF YOU are tired of the cold cream you are using—and all of us want a change in the spring of the year—incline your ears while I tell you something:

A company, which has for longer than I can remember been making cosmetics of the superior kind, has a cream worth your instant attention. While this cream is good for any skin, I would certainly recommend that the girl with a dry skin put on her hat, go right downtown and buy herself a present of it.

There are many "rejuvenating" creams on the market, all different, but you have to make up your mind when you use them that you are not going to be rejuvenated no matter how many jars of cream you use. What really happens is that this particularly "rejuvenator" needs very little massage and yet soaks into the pores quickly, giving most efficient service, and keeping your skin smooth and fresh looking.

Leisurely Meal More Important Than the Menu

Meal, However, Should Include Varied Food Elements.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

What about fats? They are important, as they yield twice as many calories per unit weight as carbohydrates or proteins. The most desirable type is that which melts at body temperature. We must recall that fats cannot be taken except in the presence of sufficient carbohydrates, as their digestion otherwise may give rise to acidosis. There is a true saying that you build the digestive fire with carbohydrates, burning your fats thereby. Butter and cream are our most available forms, but they constitute expensive food staples.

A common but erroneous impression is that fatty foods are indigestible. They leave the stomach slowly and in many instances are responsible for the sensation of comfort and well-being which follows a balanced meal. Every normal diet should contain—in each 24 hours—at least 1½ ounces of fat.

Vitamins Balance Diet.

In order to differentiate vitamins they have been labeled with letters and there are several of them, each having its special function in aiding nutrition. A is found in fats, milk, egg yolk, and green vegetables; B in yeast, cereals, eggs, etc.; C in fresh fruits, vegetables, and milk; D in butter, cod liver oil, etc., and E in nearly all of our ordinary foods.

Without A we would develop sore eyes and become easy prey to infections. B promotes appetite and protects against beriberi; another type of B opposes the onset of pellagra. Scurvy follows a deficiency of vitamin C. Without D children become rickety and the normal growth of bones and of teeth is interfered with. E is needed for reproduction.

Most Diets Excessive.

Just how much shall we eat? We have stated often that the average adult not engaged in active exercise will not require more than 2,500 calories in each 24 hours, and those doing hard manual labor will require but 3,500. Nevertheless, the diets of most of us, if accurately calculated, would show an excess food consumption.

All this goes to show that the healthy individual need give but passing attention to what he eats. We may all profit in possessing some information about foods, but it is well to recall that more digestive difficulties arise from hurried, irregular meals than from any other cause. Stick to a menu that suits you; if an adult, one that maintains weight and strength, but consume your food leisurely in as pleasant surroundings as can be secured.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Here's Problem of Youth Wishing to Marry, in Face of Family Responsibilities and Small Income.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A young man of 21, employed by the government, loves a young lady of 20 who lives in a distant city. They have known each other a long time and he wishes to marry her. He came here from that distant city about 18 months ago to accept his present job.

The boy sees the girl about once a month and their families are very close. He has tried to get a transfer to his home city, but it has been refused. He has a father who is now almost too old to work any longer and a younger brother who will not be ready to look for employment for about two years. The girl has consented to marry him but knowing his financial responsibilities, is leavng it to him set the date.

• • • •

Now, the problem is this: The young man believes if he were to get married right now, he could just get along on what he is making. He also believes that to wait much longer is to be unfair to his fiancee and possibly to do some harm to their relationship. Do you believe this young man should make his own decision? What advise would you offer to him?

• • • •

This problem, I might explain, is not my own. It is the problem of a young friend of mine who has come to me for advice. I don't know what to tell him, and so I am turning to you. Your help will be appreciated.

BYSTANDER.

He Should Decide.

DEAR BYSTANDER: It seems to me this is a problem for these two young persons to decide for themselves. Or, if they cannot reach a decision unaided, the problem should be put up to some old family friend who knows both their backgrounds; who knows what the boy's prospects are; what his responsibilities toward his family are; what his income is; how well qualified the girl is to be the helpmate of a struggling young husband; and who can guess, at least, what the possible results may be if they do marry now, or what the results may be if they decide to postpone marriage for a few more years.

• • • •

I believe if I were in this young man's shoes I would talk the problem over with my employer, first of all, for I have never yet seen the hardest - boiled employer who wasn't inclined to take a fatherly and often even sentimental interest in the marriage intentions of the fledgling youth in his employ. Many employers approve of early marriage for their employes, believing it gives them a greater sense of responsibility, increased efficiency and maturer dependability. His employer should be able to give him wise and disinterested counsel. Another excellent adviser whom he might seek out is his family physician. In the final analysis the boy will probably act from the heart rather than the head, anyhow, and such opinions as he solicits and receives will undoubtedly serve only to crsytallize some half-formulated decision which already exists in his own subconscious mind—whether those opinions are in line with or against that embryonic determination.

Widow's Query.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been thinking of joining a get-acquainted club, but am undecided as to whether a good class of person would do such a thing. I am a widow, 40 years of age, and would much appreciate your opinion as to the advisability of such a move.

Sincerely yours,
VIRGINIAN.

• • • •

DEAR VIRGINIAN: I think the best approach to your problem is, first of all, to lay aside any concern as to whether what you consider doing would be regarded as "genteel" or "refined" by the "better class of persons." If you are suffocated with loneliness, hungry for wholesome companionship, you must act from that premise. The next thing to consider then is what reputable organizations exist for meeting your social needs. If there are any such organizations in your community, by all means join them. Perhaps you could interest yourself in civic betterment projects, in political study club activities, in church work, in volunteer social work on behalf of the underprivileged, in work for the schools.

• • • •

If you live near Washington, I suggest you contact the Community Center, which can be reached by telephoning NAtional 6000 and asking to be connected with its headquarters. The center has a variety of social activities, including card parties, dancing classes and study in languages and crafts, all of which brings one into contact with persons interested in improving themselves and in making friends among persons with similar needs and interests. Or you might inquire of the local Y. W. C. A. at Seventeenth and K streets northwest, telephone Metropolitan 2162 as to what projects you would be eligible to enroll in there.

Children Can Enjoy Beauty, Expert States

Useless to Ask Them to Respond as Adults Do, However, Is View.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"MY CHILDREN don't like nature. In fact I sometimes wonder if they have any appreciation of beauty at all."

"How do you know?"

"Why, they never notice it, and when I call their attention to beautiful views or to a picture they make no response. They will make the most heavenly moonlit night hideous with their caterwauling and they even make fun of people who exclaim over a sunset."

None of these reactions, however, is any indication of a child's real feelings. He may be passionately fond of nature and be ashamed to show it because of the inadequacy of his means of expression, and also for fear of ridicule from his friends. He cannot put his emotions into words partly because he does not fully understand them, partly because he has not the words at his command. Somewhere, however, locked away out of sight, there may exist poems which he has written or collected and bits of his diaries which would be a revelation to his parents, so full are they of sunsets and moonlit nights.

As to what his parents call "caterwauling"—he may imagine that he is singing or imitating Indians or birds. No doubt the cats on the fence at night consider their noises beautiful. It all depends on the ears of the listener. And then, too, he cannot refuse to do what the crowd does. If they scream and yell, he must do the same or risk the stigma of being considered "different."

It is useless to ask the child to respond to beauty as the adult does. Nor is it wise to insist on his looking at sunsets or views or pictures. Call his attention to beauty as one would an adult's and let it go at that. Surround him with beauty and he will absorb it and make it his.

Learning To Pronounce

DICK and Evelyn off to the movies again! Dorothy watches them, heartsick, bewildered.

She rushes off to tell Helen her unhappiness.

"I just can't FIGGER it out," she sobs. "The two of them stepping out to that new FILLUM! He wouldn't UV done that three weeks ago! I think it's disPICKable. Just beCUZ she's more ADept at flirting than I am!"

There, in those mispronounced words, is the clew to Helen's tragedy. And bad speech will continue to cheapen her, in Dick's eyes and in everyone's, until she corrects it.

Surely she can learn to pronounce "figure" as FIGyour; "film" in one syllable; "have" with H and A fully sounded, not shortened to UV; "despicable" as DESSpicable; "because as beKAWZ; "adept" as aDEPT.

Our language is full of word traps, with puzzling tricks of accent. Be sure to say COMparable, not comPARable; DIRigible, not diRIGible; conTRASTing, not CONtrasting; inDISputable, not indisPUTable.

Nothing shows up a careless mind, or defects of education quicker than slipshod pronunciation. Our 40-page booklet, Words Most Often Mispronounced, call attention to pitfalls of language, shows clearly how to say each word correctly. Weed out one error a day. Soon you'll be speech-perfect!

SYNOPSIS.

Though her childhood sweetheart, faithful George Dwight, pleads with her to come home to America and marry him, Ruth Starling insists on staying in London and using her recently inherited wealth to go on the stage. Through her London lawyer, Mr. Singleton, Ruth meets Capt. Philip Trefane and his wife, Iris, two scheming adventurers. Capt. Trefane is interested in theatricals, though short of capital. Ruth offers to put $250,000 into a theatrical venture under his management. His aunt, the Marchioness Cicester, is loaning the Trefanes her old Cornwall castle for the summer and Ruth accepts their offer to stay with them as a paying guest. Capt. Trefane, using his contract with Ruth as security, insures her life in his favor. Iris hires a fortune teller to tell Ruth that her association with them will be "all roses," though the woman hints to Ruth of dire happenings.

CHAPTER NINE.

THREE DAYS after her interview with the famous London fortune-teller, Ruth Starling stepped down onto a tiny railway platform within sight of the deep blue Cornish sea.

A moment later she saw Philip Trefane eagerly looking out for her, and as their eyes met an expression of eager pleasure flashed into his fair tanned face, and the American girl felt a thrill of real joy.

They clasped hands, and Ruth noticed that he looked quite different from the last time she had seen him, when he had brought to her hotel what he had called "their informal little agreement" for her to sign. His face had then borne a tired an anxious expression; also his manner had been brusque and a trifle awkward.

"Welcome to Cornwall!" he exclaimed, heartily, while the one porter was dealing with what looked like a great deal of luggage heaped up on the narrow platform.

"Now isn't my wife a clever woman? I thought you'd bring a couple of suitcases, but she was certain you'd have a regular trousseau! It's thanks to her that there's a van for your things, as well as the closed motor car lent us by my aunt. Lady Cicester didn't want you to be blown about in our ramshackle open flivver, for one never knows what the weather's going to be like in this part of the world."

A New World.

As she was ushered into the motor by a footman—survival of the days of carriage horses—Ruth felt as if she had suddenly been transferred into another world. It even savored of an adventure to find herself spinning along between high hedges of sweetbriar and honeysuckle, after having had her knees covered by the light carriage rug which had on a corner of it an embroidered coronet.

They had been driving for about 20 minutes when her companion exclaimed: "Now look to your right!"

Quickly she obeyed, and the vast gray stone mass of Perranuth castle rose before her, appearing even more imposing and magnificent than she had expected.

The battlemented building sprang on the land side from a huge mound and a flight of granite steps led up to a broad oak door. While he helped her to alight her host exclaimed: "I wish I could say 'Welcome to my roof tree.' But alas! though my ancestors lived here for hundreds of years, my grandfather was foolish enough to sell the castle for a mere song to a cousin whose descendants own it now."

When they had nearly reached the square platform where terminated the flight of granite steps, he shouted, "Iris?" and the oak door swung open, revealing Philip Trefane's wife framed between two stone pillars.

Iris was wearing a thick white woolen frock which made the more apparent her miraculous slenderness, and just as had been the case with her husband, an expression of pleasure, nay, delight, lighted up her face as she held out both her hands to the newcomer. Again Ruth told herself that she was indeed fortunate in these new friends.

Small wonder that Iris Trefane felt happy! Up to a moment ago she had felt nervously afraid that Ruth Starling might change her mind, or have her mind changed for her, for it had still all seemed too good to be true! Also, she had realized during the last few days that Philip was even more nervous than herself, though she was aware that a steady stream of money had begun to flow from this pleasant looking girl's banking account to the hidden place where, for the moment, her husband kept his secret funds. There were times in their lives when Iris deliberately avoided knowing anything of her Philip's business, and the terms of his contract with this young American actress happened to be one of them.

"I'm afraid you must be very tired, Miss Starling. Some people like to go straight off to bed when they arrive here from London," she observed in the low peculiar voice Ruth had found enchanting at their first meeting at the Dragon Club.

Explores House.

"I'm not a bit tired!"

The speaker felt a sudden dread of being maybe banished to her own room—perhaps being even made to go to bed on this glorious afternoon! So she was relieved to hear the other's quick reply: "Then come into the great hall and we'll have tea there. By the way, I know Americans don't always like tea, so there's coffee, too."

She opened a door leading straight from the small paneled lobby into a vaulted apartment of magnicent proportions. What furniture there was, and there was not much standing on the stone floor, consisted of oak chests pushed up close to the walls, three oak tables, and a number of high, walnut wood chairs with petit point seats. There were four windows. Two of them were filled with stained glass, showing the coats of arms and of the families to who Perranuth Castle had belonged for close on 1,000 years. The two other windows, filled in with diamond-paned glass, were now widely open and showed the long line of sea.

On the left wall, above the deep fireplace, hung a contemporary portrait of Charles 2d, and underneath the date 1644.

"He was our last royal visitor," said Ruth's hostess, smilling what the other was soon to learn was her usual slightly cynical, disillusioned smile. "But he only stayed here two nights, after he had left the glories of Michael's mount. Three years ago, when we were last lent the castle, I turned the apartment which was called 'the king's room' into a sitting room."

Ruth was in truth both tired and hungry, and Iris gently pushed her down into a chair. "Now then, sit down just as you are and have a good tuck-in! It's a bit early for me, but I'm going to have a cup of tea all the same."

Philip sat down in one of the three easy chairs and, addressing Ruth, he exclaimed: "You should have seen the place when we came here for our honeymoon six years ago! That girl of mine worked like a beaver, and made me work, too, to get it shipshape. In fact, I've had a very soft spot for both cooks and housemaids ever since; and we didn't finish the job till three years ago. Still, I shall never forget our honeymoon."

Philip Is Vexed.

"Nor shall I!" Iris smiled at him, and there was a tender as well as a humorous expression on her face. "The first thing I had to do—luckily we had had three days of what afterward seemed comfort in a commonplace hotel at Penzance—was to go down on my hands and knees and scrub the floor of the room I discovered was to be my bedroom!" And then she sighed, "I was young and strong then."

Her husband jumped up and laid his hand on her shoulder. "You look worn out," he said vexedly. "I thought you were going to have a rest for once, darling, now that you've got those two girls in from the village to help you."

"I'm not a bit tired, Phil. I had a wonderful morning, mostly playing about in the sea, and then lying sunning myself on the beach."

He turned to the newcomer, "This is a wonderful place in spring! We were here the first time in spring, weren't we, sweetheart?" and he turned to his wife.

She smiled, "Of course we were; don't you remember the wild narcissi?"

He shook his head. "I only had eyes for you; you were far lovelier than any flower."

She reddened as she exclaimed: "Don't make love in company, Phil; it makes me feel shy!"

She was drinking a large cupful of weak tea she had just made, and it seemed to revive her. He asked abruptly, "Where's Helen?"

A frown came over the beautiful face of Iris Trefane. "She's in the studio, of course. Please don't try and dig her out, Phil."

"You're wrong, dear, she ought to be pulling her weight."

"You'll never make her do that," and the tone was contemptuously scornful.

He threw a quick look at Iris, and then he addressed Ruth Starling. "I can't remember if I told you that I have a stepdaughter called Helen Bates? I'm sorry to say she's a most tiresome little girl." He waited a moment, "Did Mr. Singleton mention her?"

"I think he did," said Ruth, feeling uncomfortable.

"Fortunately for you, Miss Starling, you won't see much of Helen Bates," said Iris slowly. "She waits 'till she is hungry before she cares to eat anything, and then she goes into the kitchen and forages in the larder."

Montgomery Group Launches Drive for More Highway Funds

Kensington Chamber Starts Campaign; Dr. Ellicott Issues Pamphlet Report, Maps Health Work for Year.

Charging the Maryland State Roads Commission with withholding from Montgomery County its "fair share" of road improvement funds, the Kensington Chamber of Commerce at its monthly meeting in the Kensington elementary school voted to sponsor a county-wide movement to compel the commission to increase allocations.

A resolution authorizing the campaign was unanimously adopted after the chamber was told that Montgomery this year is receiving only $35,000, although $10,830,657.17 is available for road construction in the State.

The resolution asks support of county officials, the county civic federation representing 40-odd organizations, and other interested organizations and individuals.

The chamber also voted to push construction of a new junior high school in Kensington, funds for the first unit of which are provided in a $180,000 bond issue authorized by a recent session of the State Legislature. A joint meeting of the board of education, the superintendent of schools, the county commissioners, and the executive and advisory committee of the chamber will be sought in an endeavor to have the bond issue sold and work started immediately.

A special playground committee, consisting of H. W. McGinniss, Richard F. Green, Archer Woodwell, Alfred B. Hastings and Charles W. Lane was appointed by President Washington I. Cleveland pending action on a proposed amendment to the by-laws to create a standing committee on recreational activities and playgrounds.

Resolutions were adopted urging boulevarding of the Kensington-Wheaton road and the Kensington-Forest Glen road, and thanking the county commissioners and the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission for refusing to permit establishment of a garbage disposal incinerator at Chevy Chase Lake. G. Milton Benson was elected to membership.

A county health program to increase the county's rating in combating social diseases and fostering infant and pre-school hygiene was announced yesterday by Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer.

Dr. Ellicott's announcement was made in his annual report, published this year in pamphlet form for the first time. Dr. Ellicott reported that the county's present health rating "is discouraging, particularly to those who have taken pride in our county's work." To improve this rating in 1936-37 is the department's main objective, he said.

The county rating for the past year, which in the report includes the first part of 1936, is given at 62 on the basis of the Standard of the American Public Health Association, in which good work is rated 100.

The department is given a rating of 81 in acute communicable diseases, which is its highest mark, and a low rating of 34 in infant hygiene. Lack of sufficient nurses and overwork of the staff was given by Dr. Ellicott as the principal cause of the current standing.

All relief cases resulting from the recent Potomac flood were reported closed at the annual meeting of the Bethesda branch of the Montgomery Chapter of the Red Cross, held this week at the home of the chairman, Mrs. F. Eliot Middleton, in Bethesda. The chairman reported a total expenditure of $2,643.92 in the disaster relief work. During the year the chapter collected and distributed 1,000 garments to school children in the district. Other reports were made by Mrs. Frank Budd, production chairman; Mrs. Harry Thompson, chairman of juniors, and Mrs. John Mann, junior chairman for schools.

Mrs. George E. Pariseau was named chairman; Mrs. John Yesair, vice chairman; Mrs. James C. Dulin, jr., secretary; Mrs. K. C. Lefever, treasurer. Mrs. John Dickinson was chairman of the nominating committee.

The annual election of officers of the ladies auxiliary to the Takoma Park (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department has been postponed until September.

Plans are being made for a picnic to Chapel Point next Wednesday.

Child Deaths Bring Police Safety Drive

Edwards Orders Special Precautions Against Traffic Mishaps.

Two Drivers' Permits Revoked for Speeding; 21 Suspended.

Acting Superintendent of Police L. I. H. Edwards yesterday issued an order directing policemen to give special protection to children from traffic accidents.

Wednesday three children were killed by motorists. Today a coroner's jury at the District Morgue will investigate the accidents. The dead are:

William Karavasilis, 5, of 353 L street southwest; Michael Maley, 3, of 420 Third street northwest, and Harry Glazier, 6, of 1315 Park road northwest.

Edwards' Statement.

In his order to the force Inspector Edwards said:

"The safeguarding of the children of this city is one of the most important duties of the Police Department, and each member of the department should take a personal interest in this very important duty."

Additional traffic happenings of yesterday follow:

Charles Cummings, 25-year-old driver for Thompson's Dairy, was seriously injured yesterday morning when he was run over by his own milk wagon in the 1300 block Riggs street northwest. He was taken to Garfield Hospital and later transferred to Emergency Hospital.

Police said Cummings, who lives at 2728 Thirteenth street northwest, had slowed the horse to make a delivery and when he alighted slipped under the wheels.

Pixlee Arraigned.

James Pixlee, football coach at George Washington University, was given a suspended sentence yesterday when he was arraigned in Traffic Court on a speeding charge. Judge Isaac R. Hitt heard Policeman A. K. Bowen testify Pixlee was exceeding the speed limit on Wisconsin avenue northwest June 15. Pixlee lives at 4100 Connecticut avenue northwest.

Jesse Richardson, 2800 Eighteenth street northwest, and Albert Tate, 2633 Sixteenth street northwest, had their permits revoked for speeding 60 miles an hour. Twenty-one other drivers received temporary suspensions.

Thirty-day suspensions—Francis L. Baker, 1020 Third street northeast, 50 miles; Luther L. Miller, 6360 Thirty-first street northwest, 38 miles, second offense; Kenneth E. Morton, 248 Eighth street southeast, 42 miles; Benjamin M. Seigler, 1365 Euclid street northwest, 44 miles; Howard E. Sherwood, 463 H street northwest, 50 miles; Bernard E. Smith, 149 R street northeast, 30 miles; Vincent J. Tozzolo, 116 Buchanan street northwest, 50 miles; Russell Follin, Clarendon, Va., 50 miles; Sam Gilden, Baltimore, Md., 44 miles; Herman F. Moore, Newport News, Va., 38 miles, second offense.

Fifteen-day suspensions—Gustav Huber, Baltimore, Md., 40 miles; James A. Ford, Brandywine, Md., 38 miles; Leroy H. Freemire, Takoma Park, Md., 38 miles; Harrison Goodman, Linthicum, Md., 40 miles; Earl E. Ridgely, 633 M street northeast, 38 miles; Milton Ridgeway, 240 Jefferson street northwest, 34 miles; Alice M. Sercell, 50 Whittier street northwest, 40 miles; Thomas C. Shoemaker, 2924 Newark street northwest, 40 miles; Lloyd E. Simmons, 2013 New Hampshire avenue northwest, 40 miles; Hattis E. Thompson, 503 Eighth street southwest, 36 miles; Roy Turner, 321 Ninth street southeast, 36 miles.

23 German Boys Due At Camp Letts Today

By bus and automobile, nearly 100 boys, including a group of 23 from Germany, will arrive at Camp Letts, Y. M. C. A. vacation center on the Rhode River, near Annapolis, this morning for the official opening of the camp for the summer.

The group from Germany, under tutelage of two German teachers, will arrive at the camp directly from New York. They are in this country to promote international good-will. About 40 Washington boys will leave Central Y. M. C. A. this morning for the trip to the camp.

$52,282 Is Raised For New St. Anthony's

A total of $52,282 has been raised by 600 subscribers for the new St. Anthony's Church, at Twelfth and Monroe streets northeast, it was announced last night.

Workers said they expected to announce they had achieved their $60,000 goal Monday night, when a final rally will be held in St. Anthony's Hall. Dr. George E. Ellis has been in charge of the campaign.

Recreation Aids Tour 2 Camps After Meeting

D. C. Social Workers Visit Chopawamsic Area for Inspection.

Far back among the trees of the huge Chopawamsic area, near Dumphries, Va., the recreation department of the Council of Social Agencies yesterday held its last meeting of the year.

It was the first session presided over by the new chairman, C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks.

Instead of holding a regulation business meeting, Finnan turned the affair into an outing which included a tour of two camps now under construction and a picnic lunch.

The camps inspected yesterday are only two of several to be built in the 15,000-acre wooded tract recently acquired in Prince William County by the Government.

One of the two will be used this summer, starting July 6, by the Boys Club of Washington. The other will open on the same date for Jewish children.

Finnan explained in an informal talk following the picnic lunch that camp sites will be leased to social agencies in Washington as quickly as the ground can be cleared and as quickly as the agencies can arrange to take over the sites.

Tramp in Woods.

The group yesterday tramped through the woods to inspect the almost finished dining hall of the boys' camp which will have a capacity of 100, the maximum number to stay at the camp at one time.

The visitors saw also the cabins, built by the members of the nearby CCC camp with logs and stones from the Chopawamsic area. They saw the hollow which is to be converted into a miniature lake with a 3-mile shoreline by damming a creek. They viewed the spot to be cleared for a baseball diamond and the level patches to be made into tennis courts.

Several women in the sightseeing party, led by Finnan and Miss Edith Coulson, secretary of the recreation department, were perturbed when they learned the youngsters will sleep off by themselves, four to a cabin. The counselors will be nearby, however; two to a cabin.

Members of Party.

Those who made the trip included:

John Remon, president of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club; Lewis Barrett, co-ordinator of recreation for the District; Mrs. Canzemove Lee, member of the budget committee of the Community Chest; Dr. Hans Weiss, supervisor of probation for the Juvenile Court; Herbet Willett, director of the Community Chest, and Mrs. Willett.

Maurice Bisgyer, executive secretary of the Jewish Community Center, and Mrs. Bisgyer; Miss Florence Dunlap, of the Y. W. C. A. Camp Kahler; Mrs. W. B. Fry, president of the District Congress of the P.-T. A.; Miss Gertrude Cone, executive secretary of the Juanita K. Nye House; G. Harris Collingwood, of the Forest Service, and Mrs. Collingwood; Joseph Carter, in charge of boys' work at Neighborhood House.

Mrs. Frank Black, of the District WPA; Adjt. Gilbert S. Decker and Capt. Louise Hinton, of the Salvation Army; Miss Margaret Merrill, executive secretary of Neighborhood House; Andrew Kashuk, head of the Police Crime Prevention Bureau.

Charles Fyfe, director of the Boys Club of Washington; Miss Mildred Terrett, of the Juvenile Protective Association; Mrs. Ethel Murray, of the Georgetown Children's House; Mrs. Mary Leute, secretary of the social service exchange of the Council of Social Agencies Allen Nolan, secretary of the child welfare department of the council.

Mrs. Elizabeth Peeples, director of the Community Center department of the National Capital Parks; Miss Louise McGuire, of the Social Security Board in the District; Miss Rita Russell, of the Federation of Churches, serving the Juvenile Court; Mr. and Mrs. Boris Eisenberg, of the Jewish Foster Home; Mrs. Sylvia Litovitz, volunteer worker in Miss Coulson's office.

Nick Carter, of the Community Chest; Joseph Murphy and Joseph Rice, of the Optimist Club; Mrs. Ray Everett, representing the Social Hygiene Society; Harry Hiles, publicity director for the Community Chest; Frank T. Gartside, assistant to C. Marshall Finnan; Charles A. Goldsmith, honorary member of the Jewish Community Center's board, and Mrs. Goldsmith; Miss Louise Pricker, dietitian for the boys' camp; Mis Coulson and Finnan.

Arts of Diplomacy Still Rule At Historic Friendship House

Once Scene of Prospective Honor to Lafayette, Its Operation for Underprivileged Now Calls Upon Miss Burklin's Tact.

Once Lafayette was to have been entertained there, but now the rambling old building, known as Friendship House, is given over to diplomacy of another sort.

Only a few days ago the director, Lydia Burklin, looked up from her desk in the ancient structure at 324 Virginia avenue southeast, to find a shabby young man standing before her. Two children, a boy of 3 and a girl of 4, clung timidly to his coat.

Under Miss Burklin's gentle prompting, the man soon told his story. His wife had gone to the hospital that morning to await the birth of another child. He himself was starting on a new job in the morning, but he'd been out of work for months and had very little money. His problem was to find a place for his children while both he and their mother were away from home.

Knew Just the Place.

Miss Burklin knew just the place. A few days before a family living in the country had told her they were having a hard time meeting their rent. It was the sort of home that would be fine for 3-year-old Bobby and 4-year-old Mary. She also knew of a friend of Friendship House who would contribute $5 a week toward their stay in the vountry. The father said he'd manage to pay the other necessary $5 somehow.

So now the two children are receiving excellent care while their mother is in the hospital and their father works; the family in the country is grateful to receive the $10 extra for a couple of weeks, and the friend of the Settlement House who contributed to the cause believes it's money well spent.

That is the way things are carried on at Friendship House, a center of joy and understanding and help in the Southeast section for the last 30 years.

600 Are Enrolled.

The place is now a Community Chest activity and has more than 600 men, women and children enrolled in its clubs and classes. Lessons are given in dancing, swimming, dramatics, art and music for as little as 10 cents. For those who cannot pay the program at Friendship House is free, with the Community Chest meeting the deficit.

Forty children are cared for daily. Those between the ages of 2 and 5 attend the nursery school. The older ones who go to public school return to Friendship House at noon for a hot lunch. After school they return to the settlement and play or study until their parents are through work.

This service is free for mothers who cannot afford to pay. Others pay what they can. But no one is ever turned away from Friendship House, according to Miss Burklin.

There was a time, however, when a distinguished guest was denied admittance. He was Lafayette. On the eve of his visit to the building, then occupied by Mayor Smallwood, smallpox was discovered in his host's family.

Veteran Relief Status Decision Is Likely Today

Whether World War veterans will be stricken from District relief rolls because they received the bonus is expected to be decided today by the public assistance committee of the Board of Public Welfare.

A meeting of the committee was called yesterday, as conversion of bonds into cash continued rapidly.

Approximately 50 per cent of the 27,000 in the District who got bonuses have already turned in all or some of their bonds for certification, postoffice officials estimated.

Some 200 of these veterans are on District relief lists, Miss Alice Hill, head of the public assistance division, reported yesterday. All are in the unemployable class, all employables having been eliminated from the rolls recently.

Elwood Street, director of public welfare, said he thought even needy veterans were privileged to hold on to their bonds as a "nest egg," but added that if they are cashed the proceeds should be used to support the recipient and his dependents.

Miss Hill expressed her opposition to splurging, even if the money went for necessities. Her opinion was, in effect, that a veteran should not be summarily removed from the relief rolls just because he came into a bonus, but that his right to relief payments should be forfeited if he immediately squandered his bonds on an auto or some such luxury.

Cowpunchers

Possibly inspired by the covered wagon days of the wild and woolly West, as they heard of them in the Republican campaign song, "Oh, Susanna," two small boys, wearing cowboy suits, may have gone for a romp with the Scotch terrier puppy of Mrs. Brown, of 122 Tennessee avenue northeast.

Anyhow, Mrs. Brown told police, her dog, who answers to the name of Scotty, had disappeared, and that she suspected the pair of youngsters, boots, lassoes and all, whom she observed playing on her property.

The dog is brindle-colored.

Awards Given To 85 Scouts, Scoutmasters

2 Local Commissioners of Organization Are Included in Group.

Finnan, Bartsch Talk; 37 Boys Receive Star Badges.

Eighty-five Boy Scouts and scoutmasters were awarded the highest honors scouting can bestow at the court of honor held last night at Central High School auditorium.

In ceremonies which lasted more than two hours 37 scouts were awarded star badges; 18, life badges; 16 were made eagle scouts, 10 made palm scouts, 2 scoutmasters were presented keys and 2 other scoutmasters were given achievement certificates.

Two District scout commissioners were honored at the court of honor. Hugh C. Armstrong, assistant district commissioner, was given the rank of star scout, and Richard Henry Rule, district commissioner, was presented a scoutmaster's key.

The evening program opened at 7:30 with a concert by the Boys Club Band of the Metropolitan Police. Promptly at 8:03 the band struck up "Stars and Stripes Forever," and, with H. C. Tucker directing, the scouts marched around the auditorium and massed colors on the stage.

C. Marshall Finnan, guest speaker, told the scouts they were participants in a great youth movement and praised scouting. Dr. Bartsch explained significance of the badges.

The candidates were called to the stage by Dr. Bartsch and Capt. Chester Wells, assisted by Lieut. Comdr. M. W. Willard and Harry Watson, and presented with star badges, life badges, eagle and palm awards. Scoutmasters' keys and achievement certificates were presented by Dr. William T. McCloskey.

Beltsville Experimental Farm Visited by 4-H Club Delegates

Boys and Girls End One of Busiest Days of Encampment; Hear Secretary Wallace Cite Nation's Natural Resources.

A bugler last night stood in the 4-H Club Encampment of the Washington Monument Grounds and blew taps to close one of the busiest days in the week of the club's annual national encampment here.

The bugler blew reveille at 6 o'clock in the morning and until he blew again at night, at 10 o'clock the day was filled with action for the farm boys and girls.

Early yesterday the 4-H Club boys and girls gathered to hear an address to Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture. He spoke at the 9 o'clock assembly, with C. W. Warburton, director of extension work for the Department of Agriculture.

Wallace told the delegates the United States has a higher percentage of natural resources for each citizen than any other country in the world and urged the delegates to conserve both natural and human resources of the Nation, reminding them that the preamble of the Constitution provides for consideration of the general welfare of the people as a whole.

"Cities continually," he said, "by their very nature, drain soil fertility from the farm. You might say they drain human fertility away, too. With population trends as they are today, 100 years hence two-thirds of the people will be descended from the one-fifth of the population that lives on the farm."

Later in the day, Ruth Durrenberger, of Orlando, Fla., and Keith Jones, of Okanogan, Wash., were awarded felloyships of $1,000 each, providing for nine months' study with the Agriculture Department. The awards were made for outstanding achievements in 4-H Club work.

Recipients of the awards not only must have an outstanding 4- HClub record but also must have completed a four-year college course in agriculture or home economics.

Ithe winners were selected from 18 applicants representing 11 States. An Agriculture Department committee made the selection. Those presented the awards were not, however, among the 150 delegates attending the present encampment.

Immediately following Secretary Wallace's address, delegates heard Dr. C. B. Smith, assistant director of extension work; Allan Cruikshank, National Association of Audubon Societies, and Eugene Merritt, of the Department of Agriculture Extension Service.

A State leader's conferences was held from 10 a. m. until 12:30.

The delegates ate lunch at the Department of Commerce. Another State leaders conference was held after lunch, but the rest of the delegates climbed into buses and went to the Beltsville farm, which the Department of Agriculture maintains for experimenting with livestock and cattle.

Those who went to Beltsville, after inspecting the grounds, had a picnic supper on the grounds. They came back to Washington at 9 o'clock—an hour before their day ended at 10 p. m.

Features of today's program will be an address by Dr. H. C. Oberholser, Bureau of Biological Survey for the Department of Agriculture, and a tour which will include the White House and the Natural History Building of the Smithsonian Institution.

House Gets Bill to Preserve Five Historic U. S. Warships

In a move to perpetuate the memory of the days of frigates and fighting ironclads, Representative John J. Cochran, of Missouri, introduced a bill into the House yesterday providing for the preservation of five historic American naval vessels.

The ships are the Constitution, the Constellation, the Hartford, the Olympia and the America.

Together, they span most of American naval history. They tie the days of point-blank broadside cannonades, of boarding with bared pikes and cutlasses, with modern long-distance warfare, where mathematical precision is as essential as muscle and courage.

The Constitution, whose famous old "tattered ensign" never struck to an enemy ship, now lies in Boston Navy Yard, reconditioned mostly through the efforts of American school children.

The Constellation, commisisoned in 1797, was the first ship of the American Navy under the Federal Constitution. She was prominent in the naval war with France in 1798, was in the War of 1812 and the Mexican War. She captured a 1861.

During the Spanish War she was used as a training ship and in the World War as a naval barracks at Newport, R. I. Stranded and dismanteled, she is still there.

The rigging of the Hartford once quivered with the ring of Admiral Farragut's command at the battle of Mobile Bay: "Damn the torpedoes! Full speed ahead!" The Hartford ran the gautlet of the bath through the Confederate fleet. Now she lies in the mud at Charleston, S. C.

The America brought the America's sup to this country in a victory in the Royal Yacht Squadron regatta off Cowes, England, in 181. Later, captured from the Confederate forces, she did blockade duty off the Atlantic Coast. She was afterward employed as a schoolship at the Naval Academy.

Most modern, is the Olympia flagship of Admiral Dewey at Manila Bay, and the ship that brought back the body of the Unknown Soldier after the World War. Dismantled and rusting, she is now tied up at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

District Officials Form Association

Gathering at a downtown restaurant approximately 50 District Government officials yesterday formed the Department Heads Association. Elwood Street, director of public welfare, was elected permanent chairman of monthly luncheon meetings to be held henceforth with the idea of obtaining more intimate contacts.

Principal address at the initial session of the association was made by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who outlined his aims for betterment of the District. Commissioner Hazen generally took a stand for additional schools, streets, health facilities, libraries and other civic assets.

Lauding the "get-together" aspects of the association, Commissioner Hazen declared he regarded the group as his "cabinet" and said he foresaw considerable aid to better functioning of the municipal government would result.

Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, was named vice chairman by the group, and Roland M. Brennan, secretary of the Board of Commissioners, was made secretary-treasurer. These officers, with J. B. Gordon, sanitary director, and Edward Dent, surveyor, will form the executive committee of the association.

House Votes 9 Measures For District

Resolutions Provide for President's Inaugural Next January.

December 26 Approved as Holiday; Gans Confirmed for Post.

The House yesterday adopted nine District bills and resolutions under unanimous consent as Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee, sought to clear the local calendar.

The measures were for the most part minor. Four of them had passed the Senate and now go to the White House.

Two resolutions make provisions for the President's inaugural ceremonies next January; two more having to do with the same subject are pending before the House Judiciary Committee. All have passed the Senate.

Gans Post Approved.

The other two Senate bills approve the appointment of Isaac Gans to membership on the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and the fixing of December 28, 1936, as a legal holiday.

Other bills, yet to be acted upon by the Senate, are:

Authorization for Federal central heating plant to furnish steam for District buildings erected in Judiciary Square or in the Municipal Center.

Extension of charters for local trust companies.

Authorization for the Treasury to assess credit unions with cost of examinations of their records.

Permit for oil pipe line in Thirteenth street southeast.

Creation of two classes of detectives in Metropolitan Police Department. Class 1 will get $600 extra a year and Class 2, to be known as precinct detectives, $240 extra.

The purpose of this bill is to enable the police superintendent to assign precinct detectives to headquarters duty in emergencies without granting them the $500 a year increase in salary.

Objections were raised again to the passage of the Wheeler bill for repeal of the "red rider" when it was reached on the Senate consent calendar.

District Alumni Offer U. of V. Scholarships

Two alumni scholarships to the University of Virginia for 1936-37 now are open to applicants, the appointments to be made by Washington Chapter of the University of Virginia Alumni Association.

The scholarships are open to all students from the District who intend to register in the academic department of the university. Ferre Bowen, 626 Woodward Building, secretary of the local chapter, now is receiving applications.

Nats Execute Triple Play, Get 18 Hits in Routing Detroit, 12-4

Tigers Given 11 Walks by Newsom

Hurler Also Yields 10 Hits; Kuhel Smashes Out Home Run.

Griffs Get 7 Runs in 7th to Sweep Series and Clinch 3d Place.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Detroit, June 18.—With the aid of their first triple play in modern Washington baseball history, the surprising Nats today collected their third straight victory over the Tigers, 12-4, and swept the three-game series.

They won the game both with the assistance of and in spite of Buck Newsom's pitching. Newsom, who issued 11 bases on balls, nevertheless held the Tigers scoreless for five innings while the Nats were piling up a 5-0 lead.

When, along about the cocktail hour, Newsom's pitching began to turn sour, the Nats fortified his lead with a seven-run uprising in the seventh inning. Newsom pitched a 10-hit game after holding the Tigers to four hits in the first six innings.

That triple play, executed by the Nats in the second inning, was a breathless affair that stunned the 6,000 in the stands. Newsom had opened the inning by walking Owen and Burns and then it was that Bolber smashed a sizzling line drive at Kress.

Bluege Makes It Three.

In the same motion that he caught the ball, Kress heaved it to Bluege at second, for the second out before Owen could scramble back to the base, and the veteran Bluege, cast in his first triple-play role in his 14 years with the Nats, was in no wise befuddled.

He wheeled and rifled the ball to Kuhel at first before Burns, who had hurriedly turned back to the bag, could reach the base, and the Nats had their triple play.

It was a 18-hit offensive that the Nats launched against three Detroit pitchers, Al Crowder, Chad Kimsey and Joe Sullivan. In inflicting upon the Tigers their sixth straight defeat, the Nats solidified their position in third place, only four games behind the second-place Red Sox.

Chapman Drives in Run.

For four innings, one hit and no runs stood as the Tigers' portion of the proceedings. That hit, a single by Gehringer in the first, came to no good, as did their second hit off Newsom, Burns' single that opened the fifth. Meanwhile, the Nats were engaged in collecting a 4-0 lead against Crowder.

Newsom, himself, drove in the first run when he trudged to the plate with the bases full in the second inning and singled to right-field. Joe Kuhel personally boosted the score to 3-0 when, after Stone singled with two out in the third, he banged a long home run into the upper deck of the rightfield bleachers.

Ben Chapman's single drove in Ossie Bluege to make it 4-0 in the fourth and big Chad Kimsey, Crowder's successor, gave up a run in the sixth when Chapman singled again to score Bluege, to make it 5-0. Then the Tigers, with the aid of Buddy Lewis' error, got a run back. They got only one run be-

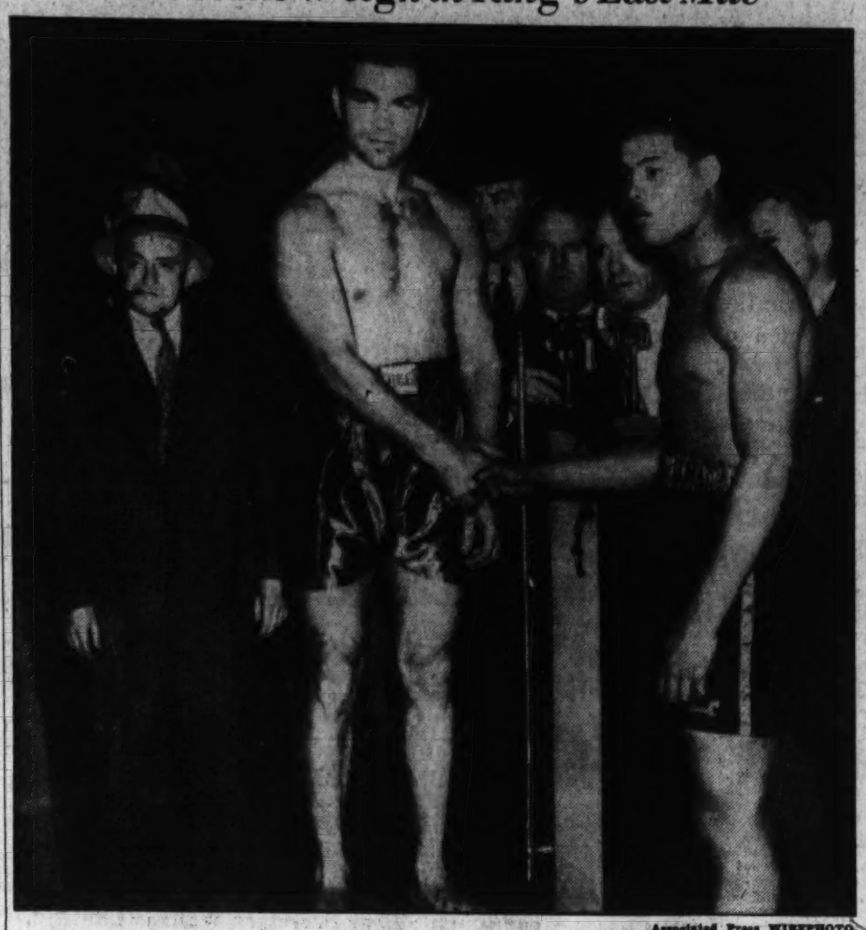
Part of the Weigh in Ring's Last Mile



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Max Schmeling, the bushy-browed German, steps on the scales at weighing-in ceremonies for his bout with Joe Louis, scheduled last night but postponed until tonight because of bad weather. Louis, who followed him, is regarding the affair with mingled feelings of curiosity and nonchalance. The German weighed 192 pounds and his opponent, 198.

Chicago Blanks Red Sox With 3 Hits, 1-0

Whitehead Bests Mracum in Mound Duel; Boston Drops Back.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 18.—Johnny Whitehead bested Johnny Marcum in a close pitchers' duel today, hurling three-hit ball as the White Sox made it two out of three over the Boston Red Sox with a 1 to 0 victory.

Although Marcum limited the White Sox to half a dozen hits, his "million-dollar" mates couldn't hit behind him, and not a Boston man reached third base.

The setback dropped the Red Sox to 4½ games behind the league-leading New York Yankees.

Detton Throws Little Wolf in Mat Bout

Chief Little Wolf's famous "death lock," which has opened the door to many a victory for the rugged, colorful Indian wrestler, didn't get him anywhere in his feature match with Dean Detton last night at Griffith Stadium.

Just when it appeared that the roly-poly Injun had the bout in the bag, the Chief somehow lost his balance, fell over backward and Detton pounced upon him like a tiger and pinned him to the mat after 26½ minutes of grunting, groaning, kicking and punching.

It was a savagely contested bout, with Detton eliciting cheers, the Chief the jeers.

Wild, hairy "Abie Kabbible" Coleman, the Hilarious Hebrew, had some 3,000 of the rassle faithful in hysterics with his capers. Coleman defeated Ralph Garibaldi, Gino's younger brother, in the final bout after 20½ minutes of everything.

In the opening match, Cliff Olsen, the Swedish Nightingale, defeated George Lenehan in 10 minutes with his "Swedish slam." Jack Donovan, the Boston Irish Terror, defeated Jean Ledeaux with a flying body scissors in 12 minutes. Hank Barber, former Dartmouth football star, pinned Jack Powell, of Virginia, in 3½ minutes with a body slam. Powell was in great pain—oh, yes—at the finish, claiming his back was broken when Barber toppled him to the canvas.

Bob Smith, Bees Coach, Blanks Cards, 4-0

Veteran, 37, Hurls 2-Hit Ball; St. Louis' Lead Cut to 1½ Games.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 18.—Old Bob Smith came in off the Bees' coaching lines today and hurled a two-hit, 4-to-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals, thereby cutting the Gas House Gang's National League lead to a slim game and a half.

The 37-year-old veteran right-hander, one of the oldest pitchers in big-time baseball, not only mowed down 25 Cards in a row, between the time Terry Moore doubled in the first and Pinch-Hitter Johnny Mize singled in the ninth, but also batted in the first Boston run with a hit in the seventh frame.

The defeat was the third for the Cards against one win in the four-game series, and pulled the second-place Chicago Cubs, who were rained out today, right up to the heels of the St. Louis outfit.

Jayvee Oarsmen Of Syracuse Idle

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 18 (AP).—Syracuse University today withdrew its junior varsity eight from competition in the 3-mile race at the intercollegiate regatta Monday as a result of a series of mishaps that had pared the effective squad for both upper-class boats down to 16 oarsmen.

Navy, after a short spin in the morning, laid off in the afternoon. Back Walsh piled his oarsmen into a bus and took them for a ride in the afternoon. Washington and Columbia got in two good rows apiece and Cornell took two short spins.

Approval Delays Holmes' Aim To Catch Ball From Monument

The realization of Woody Holmes' current No. 1 ambition in life, to catch a baseball thrown from the top of the Washington Monument, was temporarily delayed yesterday while the 19-year-old Raleigh youth sought permission from the superintendent of public buildings to attempt the feat.

The official okay may be forthcoming today, but with great official reluctance—if at all. A Mr. B. C. Gardner, who was consulted in the matter, said that permission probably would be granted, but only if the boy persisted in trying after hearing of the tremendous difficulties he will encounter.

"Gabby" Street, former Washington catcher and the only man to perform the stunt, Gardner said, suffered a painful injury to his hand and was confined to a hospital several days thereafter. Clark Griffith, however, contradicted this statement, adding that he himself later tossed a ball to Bill Sullivan, the old White Sox catcher, which was missed.

"He could have caught it," Griff said, "but lost his nerve just as it got to him and only stuck out one hand."

But Gardner presented a mighty strong argument in the guise of a test made only last week which revealed that an object the size of a ball is traveling 275 miles per hour when it strikes the ground after being thrown from the shaft. Cross-currents and the terrific wind velocity, in Gardner's opinion, would not only render the feat extremely hazardous, but well-nigh impossible.

Informed of these obstacles last night, Woody only said that he "wasn't around when Street caught the ball," nor is he familiar with cross-currents and wind velocity, but still believes he can do the trick and he's still determined to try.

Fight, Called, Scheduled Tonight

Decision to Delay Fight Made Shortly After Pair Weigh In.

Max Is Nervous, Jittery, Negro Calm, Weather Forecast Is Fair.

By Bill McCormick,
Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 18.—Max Schmeling, who was to have faced Joe Louis here tonight, received a stay of execution from the weather man. The postponed bout scheduled to go 15 rounds, which it may do if Louis breaks an arm, and leg, will be held tomorrow night, weather permitting.

At the official weighing-in ceremonies, a hilarious affair held in Mike Jacobs' newly acquired Hippodrome, Schmeling weighed 192 pounds and Louis recorded a surprisingly low 198.

"Joe is in the best shape of his career," stated John Roxborough, co-manager of the Brown Bomber. "At the last minute, we decided to dry him out and that is the reason his weight went down."

To the writer Louis appeared a trifle drawn and wan, but that is exactly the way he looked when he clambered into the ring to give Max Baer the first real beating the Hollywood harlequin ever received.

Schmeling seemed to have lost his air of confidence that told the world from his training camp at Napanoch, N. Y., that Der Schlager would enter the ring without fear of the Tan Tornado from Detroit.

The postponement ordered after a morning of steady drizzling from the skies did not seem destined to help the gate receipts, which will fall far short of the $1,200,000 figure first predicted by Promoter Mike Jacobs. Even with a last-minute rush, which Jacobs is expecting, the gross is not expected to go beyond $800,000, and many are willing to wager that all the customers lured into the battlefield will not contribute more than $500,000 toward the cause.

The Broadway gamblers, who have been more or less wary about offering the proper odds on Louis because of the whipping they took when Jim Braddock defeated a 1 to 10 favorite-upset Max Baer, opened up a bit today, boosting the wagering percentages from the point where one received only $5 for every $1 risked on Louis to a stage where Joe is the long end of six and seven-to-one odds.

One must risk two-to-one or better, on the proposition that Louis will stop Schmeling and the odds that Schmeling will stop Louis are practically fabulous.

Not since the palmy days of the Hippodrome has that Sixth avenue theater, which will be converted into a fight arena by Jacobs in the near future, seen so many first-class comedians in action as performed there today at the weighing in.

First on the program was a ribtickling performance by the New York police department which insisted that every one take a seat in the site, which still was dressed up as it was for Jock Whitney's colossal flop, "Jumbo." After shooing everyone out of the circus ring in which Louis and Schmeling were to weigh in, the coppers promptly let down the bars to a flock of cheap racketeers and petty politicians, who very successfully obscured the view of the timid writers who stayed set where they were put.

After New York's finest had finished creating an odor in the joint, which still smelled from the elephants used in Jumbo, the New York State Athletic Commission sprung into action. Brig. Gen. Phelan was a wonderful sight as he hustled toward the cameras snapping official pictures of the weighing in. Bill Brown, the only Democrat on the Republican commission, failed to miss a picture, until toward the last when he began to weaken in the noble cause.

Tow Knocked Out In Fight at Dallas

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Dallas, Tex., June 18.—Tom Beaupre, the Dallas butcher boy, stopped Bob Tow, of Alexandria, Va., in the second round of a torrid battle here tonight, with a couple of crashing rights to the chin.

Tow started off with a rush carrying the fight to Beaupre and had the best of the early exchanges, cutting the local boy's eye and staggering him with a couple of overhand rights to the chin.

He grapped Beaupre around the knees and, although badly stunned, managed to beat the count. After a few light exchanges Beaupre got over that smashing right and Tow went down face forward and at eight was still in the prone position when the bell saved him. But when the bell sounded for the second round Tow was unable to respond.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Blonde Edith Clarke, the top-seeded favorite, and black-haired Mary Cootes, the defending champion, gained the final round of the District women's tennis championships yesterday at Columbia Country Club.

Miss Clarke's high-powered driving tactics brushed aside Mary Ryan, No. 5 seeded player, 6—2, 6—2. She will meet Miss Cootes for the championship tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Continuing her policy of winning only by the narrowest of margins, Miss Cootes battled stubborn Sara Moore, No. 3 seeded player, to scores of 9—7, 10—8, before gaining the finals. Miss Moore had a 5-2 lead in the first set and at one juncture was 2 points from taking it.

It was easily the tensest, most hard-fought match of the tournament, not excluding the three-set encounter between Mrs. Doreite Miller and Miss Cootes on Wednesday. For two hours the girls swatted away at each other, scarcely a point being decided without a long, suspense-laden rally.

Miss Moore was virtually out on her feet at the finish. Miss Cootes was much fresher at the conclusion. Hard-swinging Sara refused to gamble on placement attempts in the later going, preferring to keep the ball in play at any costs, and Miss Cootes took advantage of her tactics to run her opponent breathless from one side of the court to the other.

Miss Moore took a 3-1 lead in the first set. A high wind somewhat handicapped play. She was playing numerous shots to the forecourt and drawing shots over the baseline from Miss Cootes. She went on to lead at 5-2, but in the next game the champion held her service at love and then broke Miss Moore for 5—4 as the latter committed four errors off her forehand.

The champion deuced the set at 5-all as Sara's forehand continued to find the net, although Miss Moore was 2 points from the set at 30-all only to have the champion smash a lob and win the game on another error by Miss Moore. Miss

Omaha Beaten In Ascot Cup Running

150,000 Watch Quashed Beat American Horse in Close Finish.

By the Associated Press.

Ascot, England, June 18.—William Woodward's Omaha went the way of nearly all great American thoroughbreds before him today when Quashed, a tireless little filly owned by Lord Stanley beat the American-owned son of Gallant Fox by inches in a breath-taking finish for the Ascot Gold Cup.

Months of painstaking and expensive preparation to win the world's longest flat race—2½ miles—and break the Gold Cup jinx that has pursued American horses since James R. Keene's Foxhall won in 1882, went for naught when Quashed, showing none of the supposed frailties of her sex, fairly outran the long-striding invader in the final furious quarter-mile.

Winner in Doubt.

A fashionable crowd, estimated at 150,000, watched the pair battle almost stride for stride up the final incline, with the rival jockeys swinging their bats in unison. None, except those almost directly in the line with the finish post, knew the winner until the judges hoisted the number of Quashed. The shout, which rent the steaming air, then paid equal tribute to the filly's victory and Omaha's brave effort. Five lengths back trailed Baron Edouard de Rothschild's Bokbul, third in the field of nine.

Omaha, with two English victories behind him, was the 11-to-8 favorite. Quashed, not listed in the stud book because her dam's pedigree has not been traced, was the second choice, at 3 to 1, to capture the purse of approximately £5,000 (about $25,000). Quashed was sired by Obliterate out of Verdict.

Thousands who backed the American horse despite the unattractive odds had reason to be fearful of their money even before the race began. The 4-year-old, undisputed king of the American 3-year-olds last year, was nervous and high-strung throughout the parade. Several times he came close to unseating his jockey, Pat Beasley, as he jerked free from his handler.

While Omaha was using up valuable energy, little Quashed, winner of the Oaks last year, strolled around as docile as a greyhound.

Yanks Down Tribe, Gain In Race

Indians Bow, 6-5; Gehrig Leads Attack With 4 Hits and Homer.

Hal Trosky Clouts 15th, 16th Circuit Blows of the Season.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 18.—The bombarding New York Yankees, headed by Lou Gehrig's four hits, including his sixteenth homer of the season, stretched their American League lead to four and a half games today by outsmashing the Indians, 6 to 5.

"Murderers' row" thus made it three out of four over the Tribe in a battle of home runs that saw Hal Trosky, of the Indians, clout his fifteenth and sixteenth of the season, and Bill Dickey his twelfth.

A defeat for the second-place Boston Red Sox in Chicago, while the Yanks were winning their game here, gave the New Yorkers one of the widest margins they have had since they went into first place in the American League in the early days of May.

Gehrig was the spearhead of the attack, hammering out two doubles and a single, as well as his homer, and batting in two of the Yankee runs.

Welsh Loses in Singles, Doubles of National Clay Court Play

Courageous Play Fails To Win

D. C. Star Finds Task of Carrying His Doubles Partner Too Much.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Ill., June 18.—Bernard Welsh, seeded No. 15 in National clay courts tennis, exhibited some of the most courageous net play of the meet as he went down to defeat in both the singles and doubles today.

In the singles, Welsh lost to Robert Riggs, Los Angeles, seeded No. 6, 6—7, 6—3, 6—1, 8—6. Riggs exhibited a better forehand than the Washington star, but steadiness was the biggest deciding factor.

Time after time Riggs went to the net to make kills when catching Welsh slightly out of position. In the first set Welsh, with plenty of speed, held the upper hand, but thereafter the Los Angeles player started to wear his opponent down. As the match progressed Welsh, gamely trying to stick in the running, was evidently tired and lost his accuracy.

In the doubles, Welsh paired with Charles Harris, West Palm Beach, Fla., losing to Norman Bickel and Robert Burgess, River Forest, Ill., 6—2, 8—6, 6—1.

Welsh played fine tennis, but Harris was erratic and the Washington star found the task of "carrying" his partner along too much.

Two seeded stars, one from the Far West and the other a resident of Chicago, became the first entrants to reach the semi-finals.

Vernon John, University of Southern California, seeded No. 12, eliminated Wilbur (Junior) Coen, of Kansas City, one of the singles favorites, 6—1, 2—6, 6—3, 11—9. John McDiarmid, of the University of Chicago, only local entrant still in the running, defeated Wayne Sabin, of Hollywood, seeded seventh, 6—4, 6—3, 4—6, 3—6, 6—4. The winner is fourth in the seeded list.

Coen, after dropping the first set by a clear margin, fought back to take the second in the fastest time of any during the day. John fought off a strong bid which Coen, seeded tenth, made in the fourth set. McDiarmid, forced to five sets by Sabin, was a little more steady than his opponent.

Rhythm's the Thing—in the Swing

Mrs. Walter Rice, whose hula-hula costume was one of the features of the dress parade staged yesterday as part of the Congressional Country Club's annual field day, conclusivel ydmeonstrates that rhythm is the thing—in the swing.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Detroit, June 18.

This department is beginning to warm up to the Ben Chapman- Jake Powell trade at which Messrs. Clark Griffith and Bucky Harris exulted when the deal was finally swung last week-end. This department did not share their evident satisfaction with the trade at that time but I am constrained to alter my viewpoint.

POVICH.

This fellow Chapman adds a bit of class to the Washington club that has been lacking in the centerfield position ever since the talented Sammy West was shipped down the river to the St. Louis Browns a half-dozen years ago. With all due respect to Powell, Chapman can do things out there in centerfield that are beyond the scope of Powell, a fast man in his own right.

In his three games with the Nats, Chapman lends dignity to the belief that he was hog-tied by the managerial tactics of Joe McCarthy, of the Yankees, who saw no place for the stolen base in the attack of the New York club. With such long-distance hitters as Lou Gehrig, Bill Dickey, Tony Lazzeri and George Selkirk following Chapman in the batting order, the stolen base was only an unnecessary risk, according to McCarthy.

Anyway, Chapman in three games for Manager Bucky Harris, has stolen exactly three times as many bases as he did in 36 games with the Yankees. He has, in fact, averaged one theft a game in contrast to the lone stolen base he had pilfered for the Yankees this season. This man begins to look definitely like the Chapman who stole 61 bases in 1932.

The fellow's spirit is another item that impresses this department. Traded from the team that figures to win the pennant to a team deemed fortunate enough to finish in the first division, Chapman is absolutely devoid of rancor. In fact, he welcomes the change, and has told Bucky Harris so in so many words.

In fact, Chapman has confided to Harris that he will lead the league in stolen bases if Harris will let him run. He'd lead the league even with his slow start this season and despite the fact that the leaders were ten stolen bases up on him, he said. At Chapman's request for permission to run, Harris smiled. "Ben," he said, "you run whenever you think you can steal a base. I won't interfere."

Chapman has lost no time in making good with the Nats. The second time he got on base in a Washington uniform, he swiped second so cleanly and decisively that he beat the throw by ten feet. And, as I say, he has stolen a base in each game since. Only once was he caught. That was when he tried to steal third this afternoon and was out by an eyelash.

When Harris asked Chapman to lead off the Nats' batting order, the former Yankee didn't squawk, despite the fact that he had never led off a batting order in his life and was accustomed to batting in third place. "Okay with me, wherever I bat," he told Harris, and Harris was again impressed.

War Department Polo Team Plays Virginians

A band of hard-riding polo'sts from the War Department, who bumped into a harder-riding Fauquier-Loudoun quartet at Middleburg last week-end and consequently dropped two close matches, will resume its feud with the Virginians today at 4 o'clock on the pock-mocked turf of West Potomac Park.

Congressional Holds Costume Field Day

Richardson, as Mahatma Ghandi, Very Nearly Loses His Towel.

By Dave Herman.

Congressional Country Club was transformed into a veritable Mardi Gras yesterday, as more than 100 men and women in all walks of golf scores paraded over the fairways and greens in unique and eerie costumes in the club's biggest "field day" in history.

The golfers were dressed almost beyond recognition, and the judges were still in a huddle last night trying to figure out the winners.

According to the rules of the committee, none would be permitted to play in the mixed Scotch foursome unless he or she wore something different.

Mrs. Elsie Haynes, former District and Middle Atlantic champion, had the crowd hysterical with her red-headed stepchild make-up, and the elongated George Richardson, as Mahatma Ghandi, almost lost his last towel as he blasted out of a trap on the second hole.

Mrs. Bill Wenzel and Brodie Sisler were partners in the Scotch foursome, dressed as a bride and groom—Mrs. Wenzel as the groom, Sisler as the bride. They were forced into marriage on the first tee with a putter leveled at "Mr." Wenzel by "Wild Bill" Rumple.

Helen Dettweiler, who teamed with her kid brother, Billy, to win the gross prize in the Scotch foursome with a 39, two over par (not bad for two who didn't have on golf togs), was dressed as a skeleton, and brother Billy as a pirate.

Winfree Johnson, as George Washington, and Miss Mary Jane Lightbown, won the low net prize with 49-10¼—39¼.

Hilarious indeed were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Payne. Mrs. Payne, president of the Women's District Golf Association, had on Mr. Payne's golf togs, and Mr. Payne wore Mrs. Payne's clothes. They switched golf bags.

Mrs. Walter Rice and Miss Martina Henderson played as hula-hula dancers.

Dr. Bob Keilty, general chairman, wore a green evening dress, and looked charming. He discarded it on the first hole, tearing it as he tried to play his second shot out of the woods.

Mrs. Ivey Goetsman was a waiter. Her husband had on Mrs. Goetzman's golf shorts.

Eugene Sullivan and George Lyons, each six up on par, were the leaders in the "Early Bird," and Bob Smith handicap against par tournaments. Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, Mrs. J. J. McCarthy, Mrs. J. O. Rhyne and Mrs. C. T. Penn tied in the women's pitching and putting, and Dr. Paul Stewart won the men's pitching and putting, with "Whirling Bill" Wenzel second. Bill Rumple hit a screaming 292-yarder and won the driving contest, while Roger Peacock had the best average with 276

Weimer Shows Power in Drill For Fight

California Heavy Foe of Burman Monday Boasts Great Record.

Frankie (Dutch) Weimer, Oakland heavyweight, who fights Clarence (Red) Burman in the ten-round feature at Griffith Stadium next Monday night, went through a vigorous workout yesterday at Humidor gym, evincing power and punching skill.

Weimer, a Californai adonis, stepped three rounds with Richie Mack, and followed with a snappy three-round drill with Billy Edwards.

Weimer boasts a great record, having conquered four world champions and lost to a fifth on a split decision.

The split verdict came in a bout with John Henry Lewis, light-heavyweight titleholder, a few months ago.

As a heavy middleweight three years ago the Californian scored a unanimous decision over Gorilla Jones, middleweight titleholder, and Babe Risko, present possessor of the middle crown. Both, however, were nontitle bouts.

In 1934 Weimer trimmed Maxie Rosenbloom, light-heavyweight titleholder, and last summer defeated Bob Olin, the then ruler of the light-heavies.

Misses Clarke, Cootes Advance

Moore went to 6—5 and 7—6, but Miss Cootes took the last three games for the set, shooting a fast passing shot by Miss Moore's backhand for the deciding point.

It was Miss Moore now who was committing the errors. She failed to score a point in the final game and as the champion rushed to a 5—2 lead in the second set it looked as though everything was over but the condelences.

Sara's customary fighting spirit refused to fold up, however, and she rallied to 5—5. Games went against service until the finish, Miss Cootes twice having set point at 8—7. She led at 40—15, but her indomitable adversary pulled out the game as the champion faltered to commit four errors in a row.

Miss Cootes took her 9—8 lead after the game had gone to deuce six times, but won the last game at love. Sara netted two services off her forehand and Miss Cootes took the third point on a net-cord shot which trickled over the tape. On the last point, Miss Moore, obviously so exhausted she could scarcely pick up a ball, netted the service.

SYD COHEN.

Syd Cohen Is Recalled as Nats Release Ed Linke to Lookouts

By a Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, June 18.—Pitcher Ed Linke sadly took his leave of the Washington Club today when he was released to the Nats' Chattanooga farm in exchange for Pitcher Syd Cohen.

Unable to win a game in five starts with the Nats this season, the roly-poly right-hander was Manager Harris' chief disappointment. Linke had finished the 1935 season with a record of eight straight victories.

Refused permission by the league officials to use a heating pad which he claimed was necessary to the restoration of blood circulation in the fingers of his pitching hand, Linke was ineffective from the start of the season.

The Nats still retain an option on Linke, who will be recalled if his performance in the Southern Association is impressive.

The left-handed Cohen, who will join the Nats in Cleveland tomorrow, has been one of the most consistent of the Chattanooga pitchers. Tried and found wanting by the Nats in the spring of 1935, Cohen is said to have added a fast ball to his repertoire.

Cohen, the brother of Andy Cohen, formerly with the Giants, will be used chiefly in relief roles by the Nats, who boast only one left-hander on their pitching staff and have often felt the need of southpaw relief pitching against certain batters.

Treasury Tennis Team Defeats Farm Credit

The Treasury Department tennis team ran its total of victories up to 13 matches in 15 starts yesterday by defeating Farm Credit, 4 to 1, in a Departmental League encounter on the Monument courts.

Treasury, 4; Farm Credit, 1.

McCaskey and Simmons (Treasury) defeated Sweeney and Allen, 7—9, 6—3, 6—3, 6—3; Phillips and Treuthart (Treasury) defeated Lewis and Vincent, 6—4, 7—5; Brownell and Foster (Farm Credit) defeated Clark and Nolan, 7—5, 7—5; Botts and Klingle (Treasury) and Coe and Ford (Treasury) won their matches by default.

GRAYS PLAY TWO GAMES.

The Mount Rainier Grays will play a double-header Sunday on the Mount Rainier High diamond. Read's Pharmacy will form the opposition in the first game and the Derwood A. C. in the nightcap. The opener will start at 1 p. m. and the second game at 3 p. m.

Doubles Crown To Miss Clarke, Markey

Captain, Mrs. Robinson Bow in Marathon Mixed Match.

Edith Clarke, City of Washington women's doubles champion and finalist in the singles, yesterday became a sharer in the mixed doubles championship as she and Tom Markey won a marathon match from Capt. and Mrs. Stanley R. Robinson, 16—14, 6—2, at the Edgemoor Club.

Mrs. Robinson, singles and doubles champion of the tournament, figured largely in the struggle, which went the unprecedented length for mixed doubles in Washington of 30 games, without either team having set point until the final one. The winners three times were less than a game from winning, leading 6—5, 10—9 and 14—13, before Markey won the set on his service. The Robinsons had the odd-game lead six times.

Pikor Gains on Palumbo With 4 Charles Town Winners

Takes Day's Feature on Ada Wan

Trails Palumbo by Pair of Victories; Rock Spray $56.20.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 18.—Lou Pikor, a veteran jockey who set an all-American record here last fall by being suspended three times in one day, has ridden his way into the hearts of the customers and officials here during this season. Waging a battle for the jockey honors here with Sammy Palumbo, Pikor rode four winners today to cut the lead of his rival to two winners. The score now stands, 27 for Palumbo and 25 for Pikor. Palumbo, although close in most of his races, was shut out for the day.

Pikor began his string by setting a new track record for the four and one-half furlong course in the first race. With Adriatic, an 8-year-old, under him, Pikor rode the route in 49 4-5 to clip a fifth of a second from the mark held by Ree.

While Jockey Berg, who also rode Prince Petty, the $18.80 winner of the last race, took the second event with Rock Spray, a $56.20 proposition, Pikor came back to complete the $230.60 daily double. His mount on this occasion was Counsellor Billy, a $12.80 mutuel in his own right.

Pikor sort of rubbed it in on Palumbo in the fourth race. In her previous start, Ada Wan had Palumbo aboard and the mare failed to win. Today Pikor was up on Ada Wan and Palumbo took Black Harmony to the post. It was Pikor and Ada Wan all the way.

In the sixth race Pikor rode Red Label to victory at a $9.60 mutuel.

The best ride of the day, however, was that of little Jimmy Feltner on Silvery Cloud in the fifth race. The Berryville, Va., apprentice turned in a heady exhibition in holding his mount off the pace of Aella and then sending to the front in a driving, blanket finish.

Chart of Charles Town Races

THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 1936.

FIRST RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:45. Off at 2:47½. Winner, Mrs. E. E. Clemon's b. g. (8), by Oceanic—Flying Flower. Trained by E. Robertson. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:49 4-5 (new track record).

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	Start	¼	Stretch	Finish	Straight
ADRIATIC	(Pikor)	112	3	5	2¹½	1½	1¹	$1.60

TWENTY THREE	(Grady)	109¼	7	1	4½	5¹½	7¹	8.70
FLIT OUT	(Shanks)	112	4	8	8	8	8	38.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ADRIATIC, $5.20, $3.20, $2.20; MISS TOUCAN, $3.40, $2.40; POLLY PLUM, $2.60.

ADRIATIC rushed into contention after breaking slowly, came on the inside of MISS TOUCAN to take command swinging for the stretch and drew clear. MISS TOUCAN, first to get away, could not resist the winner, but showed a good effort. POLLY PLUM lacked usual early speed, but gained through the stretch. MISS JOYOUS went forwardly, but tired in the closing stages. PIPE DREAM made up some ground in the late stages. TWENTY THREE faltered after getting away on top. FLIT OUT was a trailer.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:12. Off at 3:13½. Winner, Mrs. R. L. Hanna's b. f. (4), by Rock Man—Sea Lady. Trained by R. L. Hanna. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	Start	¼	Stretch	Finish	Straight
ROCK SPRAY	(Berg)	109	3	3	1½	1¹	1¹	$27.10

POUL TIP	(Palumbo)	108	6	6	6¹	8	7½	8.90
HEATHER LASSIE	(Leonard)	104½	1	5	3½	4½	8	68.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROCK SPRAY, $56.20, $16.20, $6.20; DORAMELIA, $3.00, $2.80; FAIR SUN, $3.80.

ROCK SPRAY raced head and head with DORAMELIA to the far turn, shook off the mare to take command and, under driving tactics, held away thereafter after saving ground entering the straightaway. DORAMELIA, hard ridden from the start, showed a good effort, but could not match the winner. FAIR SUN broke on top, lacked early speed, and then came with a rush in the stretch and should win a longer race. CANOPIA, away tardily, was pulled up repeatedly when blocked during the first quarter and came with good speed when clear. VALEEN could not keep up.

THIRD RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:39. Off at 3:42½. Winner, Mrs. M. M. Dunaway's b. g. (7), by Wise Counsellor—Tribal. Trained by H. Willis. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:28.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COUNSELLOR BILLY, $12.80, $5.20, $3.20; TRYLUBRIA, $4.00, $3.00; GAY LASS, $3.00.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight

BO DEAN	(Shanks)	112	2	1	7²	7⁴	7	7	6.40
TEXTON	(Root)	107	7	8	8	8		Lost rider	4.80

COUNSELLOR BILLY, showing high speed from the start, withstood early challenge from THEIR FIRST and MONOCACY and held TRYLUBRIA safe in the final drive. TRYLUBRIA, within striking distance of the leaders from the beginning, came around on the outside of MONOCACY entering the stretch and came with a rush in the last sixteenth. GAY LASS closed much ground in the final quarter, but hung at the end. MONOCACY was bothered going into the first turn, went to the outside for racing room, moved up menacingly for the stretch, but hung thereafter. TEXTON lost rider on the backstretch.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $230.60.

WEATHER, CLOUDY. TRACK, FAST.

FOURTH RACE—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. The De Haven. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:10. Off at 4:20. Winner, Mrs. R. Wells' b. m. (6), by The Wanderer—Ayrlade. Trained by H. L. Smith. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:00 2-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	Start	¼	Stretch	Finish	Straight
ADA WAN	(Pikor)	109	3	1	1¹	1¹½	1¹	$6.80

SHAGGY ANN	(Smith)	109	1	3	3¹½	3½	5⁵	4.10
MISS SYMPHONY	(Garrett)	104	4	2	5¹½	6	6	13.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ADA WAN, $15.60, $5.40, $3.20; BLACK HARMONY, $3.40, $2.60; NAY NAY, $2.60.

ADA WAN, favored by the break, was tiptoed to the front at once, saved ground all the way and had speed in reserve at the end. BLACK HARMONY, fractious at the post and started from outside of the gates, moved into contention immediately and continued gamely, but was no match for the winner. NAY NAY went evenly. SHAGGY ANN could not get to the front after running along the rail and quit. KENRIDGE closed willingly. MISS SYMPHONY was never a factor.

WEATHER, DRIZZLING. TRACK, FAST.

FIFTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. The Hilltop. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:50. Off at 4:50½. Winner, Claud Feltner's gr. f. (4), by Neddie—Sunny Cloud. Trained by C. M. Feltner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:26 2-5

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight

AELLA	(Hernandez)	110	3	2	1½	1½	2½	6³	4.40
MORE PEP	(Shanks)	113	7	6	7	7	7	6	20.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SILVERY CLOUD, $6.40, $4.60, $3.60; LUCULLENT, $11.00, $8.40; HELEN BAB, $4.60.

SILVERY CLOUD, excellently handled, was rated along off the pace of AELLA, took command swinging for the stretch and then withstood a long drive to stave off LUCULLENT'S rush. The latter, far back along the backstretch, circled horses to enter contention in the stretch and closed gamely. HELEN BAB came willingly in the final drive, but hung at the end. DAFFY came through on the rail at the far turn, but was shut off. EGEON raced wide most of the way. AELLA quit after setting the pace. MORE PEP was a trailer from the start.

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, FAST.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:16. Off at 5:16½. Winner, W. G. Townsend's br. f. (4), by Peter Wrack—Rose Quarts. Trained by E. B. Townsend. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:26 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED LABEL, $9.60, $5.00, $4.20; HURDY GURDY, $17.00, $5.40; SEA FINN, $3.00.

RED LABEL, within striking distance of the leaders from the start, came with good courage when put to a drive, wore down HURDY GURDY and was drawing clear at the end. HURDY GURDY, hard ridden while running with BONNIE DHU, tired slightly in the last sixteenth. SEA FINN showed an excellent effort and closed gamely. DIAN, a trailer to the far turn, took the overland route and closed willingly. BONNIE DHU quit after setting the pace. WHISKORA and AUFOIN never factors.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:45. Off at 5:48. Winner, R. L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRINCE PETTIE, $18.80, $6.40, $5.00; LADY GLASGOW, $3.80, $3.00; MONEDY, $3.80.

PRINCE PETTIE, closest to the pace of LADY GLASGOW from the start, came with a rush when put to a drive at the head of the stretch and won going away. LADY GLASGOW, sent to the front at once, was rated along in front, but tired suddenly in the last 25 yards. MONEDY, within striking distance of the leaders from the start, hung in the final drive. EXCLUSIVE moved up on the outside nearing the stretch, but faltered. JOLLY KING saved ground all the way and had no excuses. GEORGE JESSEL went evenly.

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

The Conservation Department of the State of Maryland has finally set to work with plans to break up illegal netting of bluefish in our fishing grounds in the Chesapeake and its tidal waters. Details of the plans are withheld for the benefit of anglers and the discomfort of those that attempt to spoil sport fishing for the scrappy bluefish.

The writer takes this opportunity to thank the powers for their sincere co-operation in assisting us in our long attempt to save the bluefish from annihilation by "chiselers."

It is only proper to warn all boatmen to look to their equipment now and save themselves or their guides later embarrassment and fines for carelessly avoiding the necessary requirements as laid down by the U. S. S. I. S.

In the present scarcity of "chum," a responsible boatman at Crisfield, Md., suggests bringing large quantities of alewives from Reedsville, Va., in his craft and anchoring on the Middles grounds and there disposing of it at reasonable cost and guaranteeing it strictly fresh and thoroughly iced. The plan in itself is excellent for anglers, but very bad for the fish—overfeeding. However, if anglers are interested, address a letter to this department which will be forwarded to Crisfield. In the meantime we wish to announce that John Neitzey at No. 12 Municipal Fish Market has a large supply of fresh alewives on hand and is receiving it daily.

During the last week, strong gale-like winds have been keeping the weather-vane busy looking for a place to settle down but up to this writing it is still changing direction. All that is required to make this week-end a perfect one is moderate winds, either south or westerly direction. Fish are not so active during the off days and will be ready to strike just as soon as the weather permits. They should be very hungry after several days of dozing. Croakers are always the exception but not this time. For this week we have picked and indicated on the tide table below the better fishing areas and the species that are biting therein. Look for the indicating asterisks.

The 382-pound broadbill swordfish taken off the Jersey coast last week has started many a local angler reaching for heavier tackle. The catch was made by F. S. Geer, unusual because it was taken a couple of weeks before the season was expected to open up.

If you plan trolling exclusively for bluefish in the Chesapeake or in the vicinity of S. W. Middles, request your captain to circle all the fishing boats and watch for signs of activity therein—if you fail to recognize either chummers or trollers registering any catches, especially the trolling boats, leave the vicinity and head (if on the Middles) for N. W. Middles, where few if any boats are likely to be found, as the general concentration is at S. W. Middles this time of year. Begin your trolling, first in wide circles, alternating back and forth for a mile or more, then, if you are still playing in hard luck and have not sighted any schools upon the surface or strikes from either deep or shallow trolling, abandon your attempt and proceed toward Holland Light and repeat the performance in that area. By covering this ground you are bound to meet a better chance than the angler that sits all day on S. W. Middles praying for them to bite. Remember bluefish move and do it quickly and it is a wise fisherman that will take the trouble to look for them. Two of the largest catches made last season were made off Holland Light by trolling, and not over three bluefish per boat were caught the same day on S. W. Middles. Capt. Cobb, of Georgetown University, was in one boat with three less than the writer in the other boat with Sidney Lust and B. Baer. We think trolling beats chumming when the boat is stopped after the strike has been received by the angler. A boat in motion spoils the sport.

Golf Course Fish Spurn A Casting Plug as Bait

Atlanta, June 18 (AP).—George M. Kohn claims you can't fool a golf course bass with a casting plug.

Kohn stocked a pool adjoining a golf course with fish several years ago and recently tried his luck. Hours of labor with casting rod and wooden lures produced no result.

Desperate, he turned to worms and landed five big bass in the space of a few minutes.

"Those darn fish thought my plug was just another golf ball," he concluded.

17,000 Rainbow Trout Stocked Near Luray

Luray, Va., June 18.—H. W. Keller, game warden of Page County, has placed 1,700 fingerling rainbow trout in Jeremys Run in Springfield district. Jeremys Run has its source near the top of the Blue Ridge and has been favorite angling waters for former President Hoover.

Nats Get Triple Play, Beating Tigers, 12-4

Kress Starts Multiple Killing in Second, Newsom Gives 10 Hits.

cause Newsom struck out Pinch Hitter Al Simmons with the bases full.

Seven Runs in Seventh.

Came the seventh and the Nats' lead rocketed from 5-1 to 12-1. Eleven Nats went to bat and seven of 'em scored after Travis grounded out. Young Joe Sullivan, who had relieved Kimsey at the start of the inning, was the victim of the dynamiting.

It happened this way: Stone beat out a hit to Gehringer, Kuhel singled to right, Bolton walked, Owen fumbled Kress' grounder, Bluege walked, forcing in a second run, Newsom singled off Sullivan's glove, scoring the third run of the inning, Chapman flied to right, scoring the fourth run, Lewis singled to right, scoring runs Nos. 5 and 6, and Travis tripled to center, scoring Lewis.

After that, nothing mattered much, and even the Tigers' three runs in the eighth when they made five hits off Newsom and had the bases full before Fox grounded out.

Maryland Stocks 112,000 Young Bass

5,000 Brooks, Browns Are Freed Near Frederick.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., June 18.—Approximately 112,000 of the 300,000 young bass spawned at the State hatchery at Lewistown, near here, have been stocked in Maryland streams, Albert M. Powell, superintendent, said today. The bass, measuring 1½ to 2 inches, were placed in Harford, Baltimore, Garrett, Allegany and Washington counties. Frederick, Montgomery, Carroll and Anne Arundel counties will be stocked with the fingerlings as they mature, Powell said. About 280,000 young bass were stocked last year.

The last stock of trout in Maryland streams for the season, which closes June 30, took place yesterday and 5,000 brooks and browns were liberated in Frederick and Washington counties. Approximately 50,000 trout, measuring 7 inches or more, have been distributed in Maryland streams since last autumn, Powell said.

Insured Banks Turn 1934 Loss Into 1935 Gain

Profits 207 Millions Against Deficit of 339 Millions.

The accompanying table presents a summary of the earnings and dividends reports for the calendar year 1935 of commercial banks insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. On December 31, 1935, these banks represented 93 per cent of the number and held 97 per cent of the deposits of all commercial banks in the United States. Following are a few of the significant facts revealed:

1. The banks' profits, after adding recoveries and deducting assets written off, amounted to $207,000,000 compared with a deficit of $339,000,000 in 1934. This was a change from a deficit of $5.43 to a profit of $3.35 for each $100 of total capital account.

2. During 1935, the banks declared dividends amounting to $209,000,000, as compared with $188,000,000 in 1934. This was an increase from $3.00 to $3.37 for each $100 of total capital account, and from $5.65 to $6.24 for each $100 of capital stock, notes and debentures.

3. Cash dividends declared during 1935 approximately equaled net profits of the banks as a whole. Earnings, recoveries, write-offs and dividend payments, therefore, had no net effect upon the total capitalization of the banks.

4. Total earnings declined $30,000,000 from $1,515,000,000 in 1934 to $1,485,000,000. Total expenses declined $25,000,000, from $1,067,000,000, to $1,042,000,000 in 1935. Net earnings declined from $448,000,000 to $443,000,000.

5. Measured in terms of each $100 of total assets, total earnings declined from $3.49 to $3.08, total expenses declined from $2.46 to $2.16, and net earnings declined from $1.03 an $0.92.

These data were compiled from reports submitted by the banks to the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Labor Gains Voice In Bank of France

Paris, June 18 (AP).—The cabinet today approved a bill for the reorganization of the Bank of France by which the Federation of Labor and industrialists' corporations would have the right to be represented on the bank's council of regents.

The weekly bank statement showed that heavy drain of gold from the bank's reserves had continued unabated for the twelfth successive week ending June 12.

The withdrawls now have brought the gold reserves close to the fifty billion franc minimum which financial authorities have stated is necessary for France's war chest.

The statement showed 959,000,000 francs ($63,614,306) in gold withdrawn during the week lowering the reserves to 54,562,000,000 francs ($3,619,316,000).

May Chain Store Gains.

New York, June 18 (AP).—May total volume of 28 chain store companies, including two mail order concerns, was $229,175,532 against $196,864,661 in May, 1935, it was estimated by Merrill, Lynch & Co., Investment Dealers.

Realty Bonds Advance After Drop in April

Eastern Prices Up 2.6% This Year; Gain in Midwest Is 4.7%.

New York, June 18.—The steady upward movement of real estate bonds in the East and Middle West was resumed in May after an April interruption, the first break in nearly two years, a survey by Amott, Baker & Co. disclosed today. Both East and Middle West average prices increased 0.3 per cent in May. This resumption of the advances came after an Eastern decline of 2.7 for the same month.

Eastern issues have been climbing steadily since January 1, 1935. In that period the rise has been 37.1 per cent, the average price per $1,000 of face value advancing from $291 to $399. Middle West prices have risen 49.1 per cent from January 1, 1935, to June 1, 1936. The average price has increased from $224 to $334.

The appreciation of Eastern prices since January 1, 1936, is 2.6 per cent, according to Amott-Baker. Middle Western issues have increased 4.7 per cent in the same five months' period.

Eastern issues continue to command higher prices. The average price increased from $389 on January 1, 1936, to the June 1 figure of $399. Middle West issues rose from $319 on January 1.

Curb Irregular; Oils in Demand

New York, June 18 (AP).—As an influential factor the strength in oil shares more than offset the weakness in mining stocks, and the Curb Market today closed irregularly higher with gains to 4 points.

Gulf Oil common and Cities Service Power 6 per cent preferred cut the trail for the advancing oils, the former gaining 4 points at 82 and the latter 4 points at 55. Universal Consolidated Oil closely followed the leaders with a 3¼-point advance at 33 and Standard Oil of Ohio moved up 1⅛ at 26½. Sunray and International Petroleum each sloughed off ¼.

Sunshine Mining dropped ⅞ at 14½. Lake Shore Mines lost ⅜ at 57, and other stocks of this type closed unchanged or slightly lower. Transfers today totaled 291,000 shares against 310,000 yesterday.

Baker Cork & Tile Co. Elects Officers for Year

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Baker Cork and Tile Company, the following directors were elected: Charles S. Baker, Albert C. Blunt, jr., H. B. Davis, Creed W. Fulton, Eric G. Jansson, William R. McComb and E. Peerce Smith.

Directors elected the following officers: President, Creed W. Fulton; vice president, William R. McComb; treasurer, Eric G. Jansson; secretary, H. B. Davis.

Stocks Prices Advance in Less Active Trading; Italian Bonds Strong.

New York, June 18.—Better prices for stocks and second-grade bonds, weakness in francs and strength in sterling, and a decline in grains marked the financial day. Stock turnover fell below a million shares. Some diversion was created by the backdown of Great Britain on sanctions for Italy, which resulted in a spurt in Italian bonds, but was not held to solve Italian financial problems.

Stocks lost a good deal of their activity, but their tone improved from the start. The day brought less rise and fall than was seen yesterday and the previous day, but the greater monotony of trading was the price paid for greater steadiness of quotations.

For the third successive day the railroad stocks closed with gains in the majority. Public utilities continued into the highest ground on the current movement, on a smaller turnover. Some of the rails rose 1 to 3 points. Santa Fe held its popularity. Other favorites were Southern Pacific, D. & H., Northern Pacific and Central. The Van Sweringen issues were harder. The various classes of Alleghany moved up 1 to 2 points. Nickel Plates climbed 1 to 3 and Chesapeake Corporation 2 points.

Steels Recover.

Steel shares recovered from their right over possible wage lifting, but their hardening was limited to fractions. Metals were firm to higher, as were the motor accessories and the oils. Merchants, mail orders, amusements were little changed. Tobaccos, foods and rubbers stiffened. Chemicals were mixed.

Stocks to sink 1 to 3 points were Certain-teed and Goodyear preferreds, Dome Mines and General Railway Signal. Gains of that much were scored for Crown Cork, Douglas, Homestake, Ingersoll, Harvester, National Supply, Schenley, Hiram Walker and the preferred issues of Woolen, General Realty and Laclede Gas along with the common. Philadelphia Rapid Transit preferred and Louisiana Oil preferred were prominent at the odd-lot post.

Bonus Spending.

Money markets continued unaffected by the strong rise in currency circulation, estimated by the Federal Reserve bank for this district at five to six millions a day above the normal for this season, owing to the cashing of the soldiers' bonus, and by the heavy reduction in excess reserves because of that development and the sale of more than a billion of new Treasury bonds, incident to the bonus financing. Payment of cash for much of the new offering has reduced bank reserves, and the Treasury has drawn down its deposits at the same time.

As a counter to that movement, the influx of gold from Paris and other European gold standard centers continues, and that adds to the excess reserves. Moreover, the bonus money soon will find its way back into private bank deposits and excess reserves on that account won't stay down for long. As a business stimulus, the rate of turnover of the increased currency circulation more than its amount is important. Every indication is that the turnover will be lively for a while, with probably a rather stagnant period following in a few weeks.

Industry Near Normal.

On more substantial grounds the trade position looks better than it did a year ago. Some of the favorable points in current conditions brought out by this month's Federal Reserve Board's review of business are: the rise in employment in the durable goods industries in the first five months, the highest rate of consumer buying since recovery began in the middle of 1932.

Surprising as its statement must be to the New Dealers who defend high and wasteful spending and other queer economic pranks on the ground that they must be used to fight business depression, and who in addition berate industry for not doing its share in reducing unemployment, the board notes that "industrial production for the past nine months has averaged close to normal." That is just what the Sun's study of employment figures has indicated all along and that has been the basis for the criticism to New Deal strictures against industry and to its policies seeking to cover its real aims.

Inflation for France.

In the foreign exchange market the old French observation that the more it changes the more it is the same thing held true. The Bank of France reported a further heavy loss of gold—$63,265,000—for the week of June 13, reducing the holdings to a figure close, considering the unpaid British gold credit, to the level below which it is supposed the French will not care to see the gold reserve sink, namely, around 50,000,000,000 francs, because of war contingencies.

Meanwhile the new dealers in France have announced a three months' inflation policy, whatever that may mean. At least it was interpreted as insuring the slide of the franc from the gold standard, if not now at least within three months, and brought fresh pressure. The currency backed to the gold point and more engagements of the metal were made, with a rise in sterling, as a result of the hurried flight of French capital to London.

Expectant as this market is of currency developments in France, there is now far less talk of liquidation in our markets should devaluation ensue. Certainly the picture looks far more as one suggesting continued influx of foreign capital into our markets.

Margin Accouts.

The condition of margin accounts disclosed by the questionnaire answers filed with the stock exchange this week is a favorable topic of debate among brokers. Those who trink that the results will prove anything to the Federal Reserve Board are distinctly in the minority. The statistics are interesting, but not admissible as evidence that the restriction of credit in the stock market is unsound public policy.

Buying Power.

The percentage of individual margin accounts in the restricted class naturally will be large. Small traders habitually speculate to the limit of their credit and the increase in margin requirements in April left them out on a limb. These accounts are important in number and are genuinely without buying power. Large-scale speculators and foreign accounts are likely to let their brokerage credit run close while holding a reserve of cash securities in the strongbox. They are ready and able to buy when the market looks right. No questionnaire could show the buying power sitting on the stock market fence.

Air Travel Gain Indicates Peak For This Year

228,000 Passengers Were Carried by U. S. Planes in First Four Months.

New York, June 18.—Air lines operating in the United States have recently been carrying the largest traffic ever recorded for a similar season. Further improvement likely during the usual peak summer months, taken with the gains already accomplished, points to a new record total of non-mail revenues for 1936, according to the Standard Statistics Co. today.

In the first four months of 1936 planes carried 228,000 passengers, or some 26 per cent more than in the initial third of 1935. Passenger miles flown increased somewhat less sharply, to a total of 99,160,000, up 22 per cent over the 1935 total.

This relatively smaller gain indicates a slight decline in the length of the average passenger flight, but of more significance is the continued tendency of passenger-mile totals to expand faster than mileage operated. Thus miles flown were some 20 per cent above the 1935 figure, amounting to 17,947,000 during the first four months of this year.

Express volume, 1,727,000 pounds, was considerably more than twice the total of 12 months ago. This type of traffic still represents only about 3 per cent of transport revenues, but continuation of the spectacular expansion of the past one or two years should result in important contributions from express over the longer term.

Gold at New Peak, 10.543 Billions

The weekly condition statement of Federal Reserve banks disclosed last evening that $63,000,000 in gold had entered this country during the week ended June 17 to bring total American stocks to $10,543,000,000, a new all-time peak. The increase was occasioned primarily by the weakened condition of the French franc.

Mid-month financing of the Government caused member bank reserve balances to drop $939,000,000, decreasing the total to $4,894,000,000, an amount estimated by the board still to be about $2,040,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

During the week the Treasury withdrew $964,000,000 from commercial institutions and redeposited it with Federal Reserve banks.

Brokers' Loans Drop $30,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers, held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City, were reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board to have totaled $1,084,000,000 for the week ending yesterday, a decrease of $30,000,000 for the week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $858,000,000.

This home was built with painstaking care—and the result is the kind of artistry, distinction, perfection and individuality that you find only in much higher-priced homes. From the sweep of the charming Colonial architecture on down to the finest details, such as the moulding and finishing touches—its beauty is obvious. And its price gives it a contrast that truthfully puts it in a class by gain class, for it has features that you'll find only in the higher-priced bracket. Has large front porch, beautiful tiled bathroom; fireplace in living room; welcome air in its surrounding shrubbery and trees; detached garage; finished attic. We'll arrange easy terms to cover long-period payments. Two blocks east of Sixteenth street on Locust road nw.

Officers Save 9 From Lynching In Texas Chase

Mob of 300 Searches Jails After Bonus Celebration Killing of Sheriff.

By the Associated Press.

El Campo, Tex., June 18.—Resolute south Texas officers came out victorious tonight in a grim game of hide and seek with a lynch mob, which hunted in vain for nine colored persons held for killing a deputy sheriff during a "bonus celebration."

The threta of violence faded as alert officers, after hustling their quarry from jail to jail ahead of a crowd of 300 persons during the night, finally placed them safely in a cell they described as being "out of the danger area."

Early today, defeated in an all-night search for the nine—five men and four women—the crowd dispersed after setting fire to a cafe where the former deputy, Tip Simmons, was stabbed to death as he attempted to quiet a disturbance.

With the officers constantly holding a slight lead, the irate mob searched the jails at Wharton, Bay City and here, only to find each time the quarry had eluded them.

A tenth colored man was arrested today and, like the others, was removed for safekeeping to an undisclosed jail. Deputy Sheriff A. H. Reitz firmly refused to give any hint as to the whereabouts of the prisoners.

Authorities had filed no charges against any of the prisoners and indicated they would take no action for several days, allowing ample time for tension to abate.

To pacify the mob, sheriffs at Wharton and Bay City allowed a few members of the group to go through the jails and see for themselves that the prisoners were not there.

Sheriff E. J. Koehl said the crowd gathered in front of the Wharton jail about 11:30 o'clock last night, demanding that the nine be turned over to it. After a search convinced them the prisoners were elsewhere, the mob went to Bay City, reaching there about midnight. Sheriff Harris Milner permitted members to search the jail there and the mob disappeared in the direction of El Campo.

Officers said they believed they had in custody all of those involved in the killing of Simmons, a World War veteran.

'Four Aces' in Dispute; Gottlieb Is Replaced

Dallas, Tex., June 18 (AP).—Oswald Jacoby, captain of the Four Aces contract bridge team, announced today that B. Jay Becker, of Philadelphia, would replace Michael T. Gottlieb, of New York, as a member of the team because Gottlieb insisted upon using certain bidding theories contrary to the Four Aces' system.

Becker teamed with the other three this year to win the American Bridge Leagues masters' team-of-four championship.

Advanced in Air Corps Reorganization

The six Army Air Corps officers above were affected by bill providing that seniority alone shall govern selection of officers for temporary promotions in rank. Left to right, top row, Brig. Gen. Barton K. Yount, Brig. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, Maj. Gen. Frank M. Andrews; lower row, Brig. Gen. G. H. Brett, Brig. Gen. Henry C. Pratt, Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Brant.

Army Officers Promoted

are Cols. Henry C. Pratt, Gerald C. Brant and Barton K. Yount and Lieut. Cols. Delos C. Emmons and George H. Brett. They will be assigned to command the three wings of General Headquarters Air Force and the two wings in Hawaii and the Panama Canal Zone.

The appointments of these six commanding generals are temporary, remaining in effect only as long as they are assigned to the appropriate commands. The 252 other promotions, although designated temporary, in reality are permanent. Officers will hold the temporary rank only until they reach their turn in the Regular Army seniority promotion list, when they automatically receive permanent commissions.

Expansion Is Factor.

The temporary appointments have been made necessary, the War Department explained, by the expansion of the Army's air force and the need of increasing the officer personnel accordingly. The exact number of officers required is to be fixed in the forthcoming report of Gen. Andrews, but there will be no demotions. The number of promotions was kept under the quota expected to be set up later.

Of the new general officers, Gens. Andrews, Pratt and Brent were previously appointed general officers, their redesignation being made necessary by the revised temporary promotion law.

All six officers have had long and distinguished flying careers. A graduate of the Military Academy in 1906, Gen. Andrews became a flying officer during the World War. Since the war he has held a number of important assignments in the Air Corps, including posts as executive officer of Kelly Field, Tex.; assistant commandant of the Air Service Advanced Flying School and in the office of the chief of Air Corps. He assisted in the organization of the General Headquarters Air Force and was its first commander.

Like Gen. Andrews, Gen. Pratt was assigned to aviation duty during the World War. He served with the division of military aeronautics in Washington and later with the American forces in France. Since March, 1935, he has been in command of the second wing of the General Headquarters air force at Langlew Field.

A graduate of the Military Academy in 1904, in the same class with Gen. Pratt, Gen. Brant became a flier during the World War, serving as assistant director of military aeronautics in Washintgon. He has been in command of the Third Wing, General Headquarters air force, since March, 1935.

A student at the Army War College, Gen. Yount graduated from West Point in 1903. After several years of service in the infantry, he joined the aviation service during the war. In 1925 he was appointed assistant military attache to the American embassy in Paris, serving there until 1929. During this period he was one of the technical experts at the Geneva Disarmament Conference in 1927 and the International Commission for Air Navigation in 1929.

A graduate of the Military Academy in 1909, Gen. Emmons was detailed to the aviation section of the Signal Corps in 1917. Since July, 1934, he had been in command of the Eighteenth Composite Squadron in Hawaii.

Gen. Brett was graduated from West Point with Gen. Emmons. During the war he served in France with the aviation section of the Signal Corps. He will be graduated from the Army War College next week.

Roland Funeral Set Tomorrow In Alexandria

Phone Company Official Will Be Buried in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Funeral services for Lawrence E. Roland, commercial superintendent of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. for Alexandria, who died in the hospital here Wednesday, will be held at St. Mary's Catholic Church, Alexandria, at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. Interment will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

In addition to his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Wiley Roland, he is survived by a son, Lawrence, jr.; his mother, Mrs. Annie H. Roland; four sisters, Mrs. T. Wilfred Robinson, Mrs. Harold Patterson, of Aurora Hills; Mrs. George F. Downham, Alexandria, and Mrs. James Conrad, of Washington, and one brother, Norris Roland, of Alexandria.

Roland, son of the late Richard Roland, was a native of Alexandria and was born August 15, 1906. He was first employed by the telephone company on August 27, 1923, as a clerk and gradually was promoted, serving as manager of the Winchester and Alexandria exchanges, being appointed commercial manager on April 15, 1932.

He was active in the civic affairs of Alexandria, being vice president and member of the board of directors of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce; a past president of the Alexandria Citizens' Association, past president of the Rotary Club and a member of the Alexandria Executives Club. He served from time to time on a number of committees of the chamber of commerce and of other organizations of which he was a member.

The body will be taken to his residence at 102 Junior street, in Alexandria, this morning to await the funeral services.

Douglas to Get Aviation Prize

Institute of Technology. Before going to the institute he attended the Naval Academy at Annapolis for three years, resigning when his interest in aviation models interfered with his training as a midshipman.

Worked on Martin Bomber.

While with the Glenn Martin Co. he helped in the designing and development of the famed Martin bomber, the first all-American plane to be completed during the war. Determined to build his own planes he quit the Martin Co. and started up his factory on the California Coast on the proverbial shoestring.

He bid successfully on several contracts for Army observation planes, but it was the round-the-world Army flight of 1924 that skyrocketed him to fame. Piloted by Army aviators, four Douglas planes left Seattle on April 6. After 175 days, two of the four planes finished the hazardous circling of the globe.

For the next eight years Douglas continued building planes for the Army and Navy. He entered the commercial field in 1932 through a special arrangement with Transcontinental Western Air. In 1934, Douglas set the aircraft industry on its ears by entering his air transport plane against the world's best racing planes in the London-Melbourne air race. His plane, carrying three passengers, a crew of six and 30,000 letters and making all the regular airline stops, came in second, averaging 173 miles an hour.

3,200 Employed at Plant.

The fame of Douglas spread throughout Europe and his new plane was purchased not only by American airlines but by Europeans as well. As his fame grew, the shoestring factory at Santa Monica, Calif., expanded. Last year 3,200 men were employed there. This year with the company's backlog filled wih orders for bombers, sleeper-planes and the new DC4s, the factory is being expanded into one of the largest in the world.

DONALD W. DOUGLAS.

Douglas' fame in the aircraft industry has been built not only on the planes he designed but on the modernized production methods employed. He has substituted machines for hundreds of processes traditionally performed by hand and is one of the leading exponents of the "conveyor" system of building airplanes. It has been said that, if necessary, a plane could be turned out of the Douglas factory every 20 minutes.

Standard of Ohio Plans New $1,500,000 Unit

Cleveland, Ohio, June 18 (AP).—A new combination distilling and cracking unit, costing about $1,000,000, will be added to the Toledo Refinery of the Standard Oil Company of Ohio, the company announced today.

The unit will have a capacity of approximately 12,000 barrels of crude oil per day and will replace some of the company's present refining equipment which is becoming obsolete due to recent advances in refining processes, the announcement said.

Aground Off Salvador, Steamer Is Undamaged

San Salvador, El Salvador, June 18 (AP).—The Hamburg-American liner Tacoma, en route from Bremen to San Francisco, ran aground today in the bay off the port of La Union. The ship was not damaged.

The Tacoma, a passenger vessel of 5,013 tons net register, left Bremen May 24 and touched at Balboa, Canal Zone, June 13.

Reports Bonus Theft.

William H. Fox, Quartermaster Corps of Fort Humphreys, Va., reported to police that a bonus check for $350 was stolen from his locker at the Army War College yesterday.

Presbyterian Revolt Spreads To New Areas

35 Delaware Worshippers Quit Church; Missouri Synod Urges Action.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 18.—New scenes of dissension appeared today in a steadily broadening circle of Presbyterian controversy.

Into Delaware and Missouri the arguments spread, adding to those already commanding attention of the week-old Presbyterian Church of America and the mother denomination, the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. Difficulties appeared first in Pennsylvania, which quarters the general offices of both groups, and in New Jersey.

Volunteer guards patrolled the property of the Collingswood (N. J.) Presbyterian Church, whose congregation voted by wide margin this week to secede from the church in the U. S. A. Its pastor, the Rev. Carl McIntire, suspended by the prent denomination, said "they know what to do" should the West Jersey Presbytery attempt to take possession of the church.

A group of 35 members of the Forest Presbyterian Church in Middletown, Del., refused to accept the resignation of the Rev. Robert H. Graham, one of the charter members of the Church of America. They declared themselves independent of the old denomination.

Communicants of the Mifflinburg (Pa.) Presbyterian Church sought to have their pastor, the Rev. Robert L. Vining, reconsider his resignation, submitted Sunday with the avowed purpose of affiliating himself with the new group.

Three churches in Philadelphia stood divided after large groups of their members joined with their suspended pastors this week in leaving the parent sect. The Know Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia became the first member congregation of the new order.

The Missouri Synod of the church in the U. S. A. protested the use of the name "Presbyterian Church of America" by the new group, and urged steps to prevent its incorporation under that title.

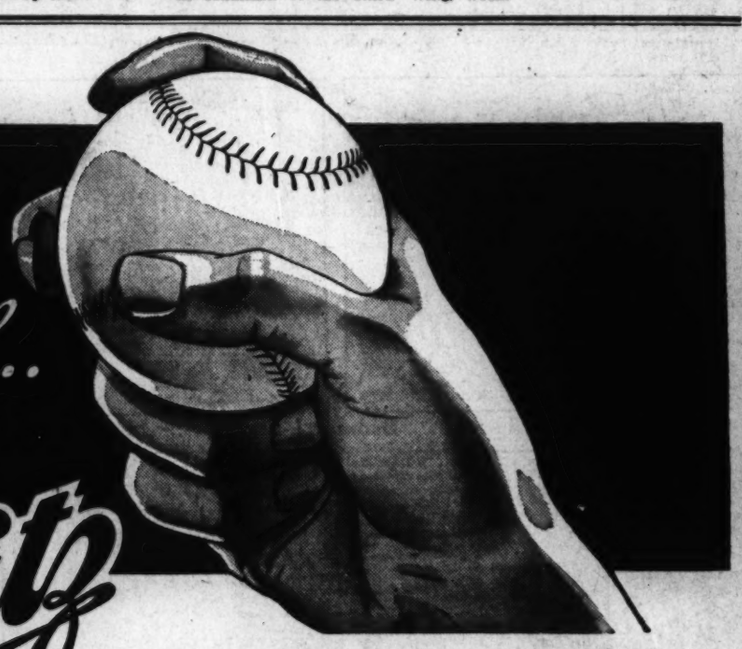
Precise Control.. makes Schlitz



Always Uniform . . Always Delicious . .

the beer with Sunshine VITAMIN-D

A FAST strike cuts the plate . . . a thousand fans shout, "Boy, that's control!" Control, first requisite in pitching good baseball, is even more important in the brewing of good beer.

The problem in brewing is to control nature's ripening agents known as Enzymes, present in all grains, fruits and vegetables. They are self-starting but not self-stopping.

SCHLITZ PRECISE ENZYME CONTROL stops enzyme action at the peak of perfection . . . gives SCHLITZ its mellow, matchless flavor, . . its appetizing tangy bouquet . . : makes it always uniform . . . always so delicious.

The Beer with Sunshine Vitamin D

Now SCHLITZ also brings you SUNSHINE VITAMIN D* . . . patented achievement . . . giving new health benefits to this delicious brew. SCHLITZ, the beer with SUNSHINE VITAMIN D, has the same old-time SCHLITZ flavor and bouquet . . . and at no increase in price. Invigorates . . . refreshes . . . cools . . . relaxes. Remember, beer is good for you, but SCHLITZ is extra good for you. Drink SCHLITZ daily for health . . . for refreshment.

JOS. SCHLITZ BREWING COMPANY, Milwaukee, Wisc.

* Each 12-ounce bottle or can of SCHLITZ contains 100 U. S. P. X. Units of Sunshine Vitamin D.
